Preface.

King's Colln Bk Co - J. 100

MANY of the old graveyards around London present a most melancholy spectacle to-day. They have been "converted" into playgrounds for children. The process usually adopted is to break up the larger monuments, move all the headstones and pile them all up indiscriminately round the walls of the churchyard. Within a very short distance of Charlton we can find at least two examples of this deplorable operation. Hence the main object of this book is to have a lasting record in print of every inscription on every stone in the old churchyard at Charlton, near Woolwich, Kent. But while always keeping this primary object in view, I have endeavoured to lessen the dullness of a purely genealogical record by giving a few notes on the history of the manor and the families who have resided in the neighbourhood.

I have naturally consulted many books for this purpose, principal amongst which are Hasted's "History of Kent," Lyson's "Environs of London," and Thorpe's "Registrum Roffense."

There is much that I have left unsaid that I should like to have said. For instance, the wills of Sir Adam Newton and Sir William Langhorne would undoubtedly both be of much local interest. Moreover, the Patent Rolls and Close Rolls contain very many references to Charlton. In one of the Close Rolls of Charles II there is a very lengthy description of all the "lands, tenements, and hereditaments" comprised in the manor. But to publish all the documents bearing on the history of any English manor would be a very large undertaking, hence I have been content to merely do the work in outline. On the other hand, although my statements are brief, I have done my utmost to render them accurate by always consulting the original sources. Those who wish to find the usual "guide book" romance in this volume will be disappointed. But they can very easily read it elsewhere. I will give a sample. In the churchyard here at Charlton lies buried one John Turnpenny, with the usual common-place inscription, stating that he was a worthy man, but his somewhat curious name was too great a temptation to the author of a well-known guide book to the neighbourhood, written some 30 years ago. This gentleman could not refrain from enlarging on his imagination, and adding to this prosaic inscription the words, "who turned many pennies into pounds." Needless to say these words were never on the monument, but were purely and simply the creation of the author's fertile (?) brain.

My object in printing the Doomsday first in the abbreviated form, and as nearly as possible in the type employed in the edition of George III, and afterwards in extenso with translation, is to try and help those who are not familiar with that record to work out other references by comparison.

With regard to the latter portion of the book, thanks to an old notebook and an old plan, there are now very few stones unidentified.

There is one little matter of some interest with regard to the two small coats-of-arms, now on the north wall inside the Church. They are the arms of Mrs. Ann Robinson and of James Craggs the Elder. Now, all the earlier county historians refer to monuments to Mrs. Ann Robinson and James Craggs the Elder as being in the churchyard. In the chancel of the church there are now two slabs commemorating these two persons. The lettering of these slabs is obviously not 18th century lettering. Moreover there is also a similar mistake in each of them—Wolsingham, Co. Durham, is spelt Walsingham. Now, I suggest that the two little coats-of-arms may be remains of contemporary monuments to these worthies formerly existing in the churchyard, and that the slabs in the chancel were erected later.

My very best thanks are due to the Rev. CHARLES SWAINSON, M.A., for his kindness in giving me access to the church and churchyard at all times, and for many valuable suggestions; to the Rev. JOHN RUSSELL DARBYSHIRE, M.A., Vice-Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge, for his most picturesque English renderings of the Latin Charters; to Mr. T. NORMAN DINWIDDY, A.R.I.B.A., for so generously making the excellent plan of the churchyard, which forms such a valuable key to the inscriptions; and lastly, to Mr. LELAND LEWIS DUNCAN, M.V.O., F.S.A., for so very kindly looking over some of the proofs.

There is a note of sadness in the death of JOHN WALLIS, the parish clerk. I had hoped to have been able to thank him in this preface for all the help he gave me while I was copying the inscriptions at Charlton, but he died on the 7th April last, after a short illness. He was born in Charlton, and loved the old church well. He had a tale to tell of many of the people buried there. As a boy he had been page to Sir William Gosset, who died just 50 years ago. On one occasion I pointed out to him a rusty, overgrown old railed tomb, remarking that at any rate we should get no inscription from that one. His answer surprised me. "A young officer lies there, who was thrown from his horse and killed in Charlton Village when I was a boy!" A spade, a bucket of water, and a brush revealed the name, "Lieut. Chas. Davidson Graham, died 1835, aged 27." John Wallis will be much missed in Charlton Village. He had a rare old-fashioned courtesy, combined with a strong sense of self-respect, and was accordingly himself respected by all who knew him.

Old Charlton, Kent.

A few brief Notes concerning the Manor of Charlton, near Woolwich, Kent.

THE name Charlton, Cherleton, or Coerl-ton, the settlement of the Coerls, or husbandmen, is not unnaturally a very common one for our English Villages. It occurs no less than four times in the County of Kent alone. Hence the necessity for more closely designating the neighbourhood which forms the subject of these notes.

The earliest reference to this Manor as a separate entity is found in the Domesday Book. It is as follows:—

Wills filius Ogerii ten' de ep'o Cerletone . p uno solin se def^o . Tra . ē . v . ca^r . In dñio ē . i . ca^r . 7 viii . uill'i bñt . iiii . ca^r . Ibi . ii . serui . 7 viii . ac p'ti . Silua . v . porc' . T. R. E. 7 post . 7 modo ual' . vii . lib . Hanc t'rā tenuer' de rege . ii . frs p . ii^{b^{us}} maneriis Goduin 7 Aluuard.

Which, when fully expanded, reads as follows:—

Willelmus filius Ogerii tenet de episcopo Cerletone. Pro un solin se defendit. Terra est v carucarum. In dominio est i caruca, et xiii uillani habent iiii carucas. Ibi ii serui. Et viii acrae prati. Silua v porcorum. Tempore Regis Edwardi, et post, et modo, ualet vii libras. Hanc terram tenuerunt de rege ii fratres pro ii^{b^{us}} maneriis Goduin et Aluuard.

And is thus translated* :—

William, son of Oger, holds, of the Bishop, Cerletone. It answers for one suling. There is the arable land of five teams. In demesne there is one team and thirteen villans have three teams. Two slaves there. And eight acres of meadow. Wood of five hogs. In the time of King Edward, and afterwards, and now, it is worth seven pounds. Two brothers held this land of the King for two manors, Goduin and Aluuard.

[NOTE.—Money as mentioned in Domesday is generally estimated at about thirty times its present value.

There is much difference of opinion with regard to the various measures of land in the Domesday Survey. It is usually thought that the Norman "Carucate"

* We give Larking's translation, which, though not so picturesque, is much more literal than that of Daniel Lyson's. [L.M.M.]

of land was the amount of land one plough and team could manage in one year; while the Saxon "Hide" is estimated at about 120 acres.

The Kentish "Suling" as a unit of land has given rise to endless discussion. There is a most able and scholarly account of it to be found in "Feudal England" by that very eminent authority, J. H. Round.]

From the above account we gather that King William gave the Manor of Charlton to his half-brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux; under whom it was held by William Fitz Oger.

It afterwards came into the possession of Robert Bloet, Bishop of Lincoln, the King's Chancellor, who gave it to the monks of Bermondsey.

The original grant is not now to be found, but among the Cottonian MSS. at the British Museum, in the volume called Claudius A VIII, is a MS.* consisting of sixteen closely written pages, all in one very neat handwriting, and written on both sides of the paper. This is called by Dugdale the "Chronicle of Bermondsey," and we extract the following from it:—

Robertus Lincoln episcopus salutem. Novent universitas vestra quod ego, pro salute domini mei Willelmi, Anglorum regis, et pro salute animarum patris et matris meæ, et pro salute animæ fratris mei, Baiocensis episcopi etc, concessi monachis de Bermundes Charletonam sicut frater meus Baiocensis episcopus tenuit et similiter ego tempore Willelmi regis, et patris sui. Testibus, Eudone dapifero, Roberto de Ver, Magello de Maundeville, Wellemode de Albercio, Roberto de Wardic, et aliis.

Translation.

Robert, Bishop of Lincoln, sends greeting. Let your Body take knowledge that for the salvation of my Lord William, King of England, and for the soul's weal of my Father and Mother, and for the salvation of the soul of my brother, the Bishop of Bayeux, etc., I have made over to the monks of Bermondsey, Charleton, just as my brother, the Bishop of Bayeux, held it and likewise myself in the days of William the King and of his Father.

Witnesses. Eudo, Master of the House, Robert de Vere, Magillus de Maundeville, Willemodes de Alberius, Robert de Wardic, and Others.

And now King William Rufus ratifies this gift in the following words:—

Willelmus Rex Anglorum, Anselmo Archiepiscopo et G. Episcopo Roffensi et H. dapifero, et omnibus fidelibus suis Francigenis and Anglicis, salutem. Sciates me concessisse donum quod fecit Robertus Cancellarius meus videlicet episcopus Lincoln de manerio suo de Cherletona quod dedit pro salute animæ nostræ ecclesiæ sancti Salvatoris de Bermundsey et volo ut monachis prædictæ ecclesiæ iter honorifici et pacifice teneant sicut Baiocensis episcopus et Robertus predictus melius tenuerunt tempore patris mei et meo tempore. Teste episcopo Willelmo Dunelmiensi.

[NOTE.—"G. Episcopo Roffensi" refers to Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester, the renowned castle-building Bishop, much of whose work still remains at the Tower of London, in both the Castle and Cathedral at Rochester, and in the St. Leonards Tower at Malling.

"H. dapifero" may refer to Hugh, Earl of Shrewsbury, or possibly to Hugh de Lacy.]

Translation.

William, King of the English, to Anselm the Archbishop, and to G. Bishop of Rochester and H. Master of the House, and to all his faithful lieges, French-born and English, greeting.

Ye must know that We have given our consent to the gift which Robert our Chancellor, to wit the Bishop of Lincoln, hath bestowed of his Manor of Charlton in that he gave it for our soul's weal to the Church of Saint Saviour in Bermondsey, and we desire that the monks of the aforesaid Church walk honourably and peacefully even as the Bishop of Bayeux and the aforesaid Robert have walked excellently in the time of our Father and in our own time.

Witness. William, Bishop of Durham.

Robert Bloet was promoted to the See of Lincoln in 1092, and William Carelippo, Bishop of Durham, died in 1095. Hence we can approximate to the dates of the above documents.

The new Monastery of Bermondsey, which was founded about this time by Alwin Child, had evidently not yet received its first Charter from the King, for in that document* we find mention of the Manor of Charlton among

Translation.

Be it known to all faithful men for all time, that I, William, King of the English, for my soul's weal and that of my Father King William, whom I succeeded in this kingdom, that I have given to God and the monks of "Charity" the Church of St. Saviour of Bermondsey and with it Bermondsey itself and all its appendages as a possession with perpetual right free and undisturbed by any tolls or customary exactions. I yield this to them in addition to whatever gifts others have made with whatever conditions, and I ratify those gifts, viz., Charlton and its appendages, which Robert, Bishop of Lincoln, granted to them, also the Church of Hardwicke with the ground adjoining the church and the tithes of the forenamed village, with the tithes of Upton which Winebald de Baalun gave them, also the Church of Omeney and its land and tithes, with other tithes of Estenton and Alvinetun which Odo de Tirone, a knight of the same Winebald, gave them, and also the tithes of Fyfeld which Roger, a knight of John the son of Waleran, gave them with the said John's permission, as well as two hides of land in Easton which Walter the son of Ausger gave them, and likewise the land at Hoddesdon which Peter of St. Olave gave them even as he had the goodwill of it in the time of my Father.

Whatever was granted to them of land in London, either in churches, tithes, houses, land, or any other property, whether in the city or without the bounds, as in parks or meadows, mills or fisheries, or any other property (I confirm the grant).

Such is my will, and I charge that the monks of Bermondsey shall enjoy the possession of their property and all their wealth fairly and freely in peace and honour.

William, by the will of the Almighty king of the English, confirms and ratifies these presents with his seal.

(Here follow the seals of the other witnesses.)

the lands belonging to the Monastery. This was still, however, in the reign of William Rufus, who himself granted this first charter for some monks from La Charité sur Loire to found a Priory at Bermondsey, which afterwards became such a great and powerful abbey. Henry I confirmed his predecessor's charter to these monks, and again we have the mention of the Manor of Charlton among the ever-increasing list of their lands.

And now we regret that we have been unable to break the silence of over a century by the discovery of any documents relating definitely to this Charlton. But in the year 1241 (25 Henry III) a "Quo Warranto" writ was issued against the Prior of Bermondsey to show cause why he had erected a gallows at Charlton, and the twelve jurors were amerced for concealing the fact.* But the men of Charlton were evidently determined not to submit tamely to be fined again for the Prior of Bermondsey's misdeeds, for in the 7 Ed. I (1278) we find another Jury of Charlton men notifying† the Court

* Prior de Bermundeseye summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino Regi de placito quo warranto clausulam habere visum franci plegii emendas assise panis et cerevisie fracte trebuchet tumbrelas furcas et infangenethf in manerio suo de Cherleton.

Et Prior per attornatum suum venit et dicit quod ipse invenit ecclesiam suam inde seisisit et quod ipse et omnes predecessores sui semper hujusque a tempore quo memoria non existit continue usi sunt libertatibus predictis etc et de hoc ponit se super patriam.

Et Galfridus de Hertspol qui sequitur pro rege similiter petit quod inquiretur etc. Ideo fiat inde Jurata etc. Jurata hundredi de Blakeheth dicunt super sacramentum suum quod predictus Prior et omnes predecessores sui semper hujusque a tempore quo non existat memoria sine interruptione usi sunt libertatibus predictis sicut predictus Prior dicit. Ideo predictus Prior inde sine die salvo Jure Regis, etc.

Translation.

The Prior of Bermondsey was summoned to give answer before the Lord King concerning the decree by warrant of which he was alleged to have a licence and right of Frankpledge, a right to claim compensation for any violation of the assize of bread and ale, a control of gallows and jurisdiction over thieves caught within the boundaries of his Manor at Charlton.

The Prior was represented by his attorney, who pleaded that the Prior had found his Church possessed of these privileges and that he and all his predecessors had always hitherto from time immemorial enjoyed the said privileges, and on this account he appealed to the State for protection.

Galfridus de Harts pool followed on the King's behalf and likewise pleaded that enquiry should be made. So it was decided to appoint a jury for the purpose. The Jury of the Hundred Court of Blackheath declared on oath that the said Prior and all his predecessors always hitherto had enjoyed the said privileges from time immemorial as the said Prior had claimed. And so the said Prior was allowed the use of these privileges without limit imposed provided the King's rights were not infringed.

† Idem Prior clamat habere has libertates subscriptas per cartas Regis Henrici senilis Regis Henrici secundi et Regis Henrici tercii videlicet quod ipse et successores sui quieti sint de scotto et scottis geldis et auxiliis forestarie percis claudendis et sartis vicentis schyris et hundredorum placitis et theloniis et ab omnibus querelis consuetudinariorum sacca et socca thol et them et infangenethf. Clamant eciam habere per easdem cartas in maneris suis in Cherletona, Rylewg, Werlingham, et Waddon furcas curiam suam de libertatibus septimanariis in tres septimanarias visum franci plegii bis per annum et assisam panis et cerevisie. Et quod hujus modis libertates ipse et predecessores sui usi sunt a tempore quo non existat memoria et quod nichil super dominum Regem vel antecessores suos petunt quod inquiretur per patriam.

Et milites at hoc electi dicunt super sacramentum suum quod predictus Prior et predecessores sui plene usi sunt predictis libertatibus et quod nichil occupaverunt seu usurparerunt super dominum Regem vel antecessores suos postea (preterie?) hoc quod perferunt veredictum suum in hec verba. Dicunt quod Prior de Bermundesey habet in manerio suo de Cherletona liberam curiam suam de tenentibus suis furcas infangenethf sacce socca et alias libertates quas clamant. Itan tamen quod tenentes sui venient ad tumum vicecomitatis bis per annum et si non venient vicecomitatus americiatur eos. Dominus Rex habet americiamenta et dicti similiter tenentes debent sequi bis per annum ad hundredum de Blakeheth per Borgesaldrum de Cherleton et quatuor homines et sumere ibi assisam panis et cerevisie et si non veniant americiantur et quod dicunt quod dominus Rex est in seisiua sicut predicti tenentes sequi debent bis per annum ad turnum predictum. Et that the Prior had again erected his "gallows tumbrel, and pillory" and committed sundry other misdemeanors at Charlton, whereon the Prior produced a charter from King Henry II giving him all sorts of privileges, which were duly admitted. We wonder where this Charter of Henry II is now.

The next document of great interest in connection with this manor is to be found in the great Charter Roll of the nation now preserved in the Record Office. The date of it is 1268 (53 Henry III). It is as follows:—

Pro Priore et Conventu } Henricus Dei Gratia, etc.
de Bermundesaiā. } Archiepiscopis, etc.

Sciatis nos concessisse et hac carta nostra confirmasse dilectis nobis in Christo Priori et Conventu de Bermundesaiā quod illi et successores imperpetuum habeant unum mercatum singulis septimanariis per diem Lune apud manerium suum de Cherleton in Comitatu Kancia et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per tres dies durante videlicet in Vigilia et in die et in crastino Sancte Trinitate nisi mercatum illud et feria illa sint ad nocumentum vicinorum mercatorum et vicinarum feriarum. Quare volumus etc sicut predictum est. Hiis testibus Henrico de Alamannico nepote nostro, Roberto Walerando, Roberto de Briwes, Johanne de Cobham, Rudulpho de Bakepuz, Willelmo Belet, Galfrido de Percy, Willelmo de Fawkham, Gilberto filii Hugonis, Bartholomeo le Bigod et aliis, Datum per manum Regis apud Westmonasterio decimo die Februarii.

quod habere debet amerciamenta eorum si non venient et similiter quod iisdem tenentes sequi debent bis per annum ad turnum predictum de Blekeheth in forma predicta et similiter quod ibi sumere debent assisam predictam et ideo dominus Rex habeat et teneat inde seisinam suam inde pacifice et Prior cum omnibus libertatibus inde sine die salvo domino Regi et heredibus suis jure et accessione sua cum alias inde loqui voluerit.

Translation.

The same Prior claims that he has these privileges confirmed in charters of Old King Henry (Henry II) and King Henry III, namely, that he and his successors should be exempt from poll tax and all taxes and from contributions for forestry, from closing their parks and assarts of the neighbouring shires from the decisions of the Hundred Court, and duties on imports and all disputes of Customary dues with jurisdiction in matters of dispute, franchise, with duties and warranties and criminal jurisdiction within the precincts. And they claim that by right of the same charters they have on their Manors of Charlton, Rylewg, Werlingham and Waddon gallows, their own Court every three weeks to define privileges, view of frankpledge twice in the year and assize of bread and ale. And whereas he and his predecessors have enjoyed such privileges from time immemorial and whereas they have in no way infringed upon or usurped the King's rights either in regard to the King or his predecessors, they pray that a State enquiry may be made.

And the Knights chosen "ad hoc" declare on oath that the said Prior and his predecessors have enjoyed full use of these said privileges and have in no wise infringed upon or usurped the Rights of the King or his predecessors beyond this true claim that they put forward in these terms. They declare that the Prior of Bermondsey has in his manor of Charlton his own free Court for his tenants, the right of hanging, criminal jurisdiction within the precincts, with duties and warranties and other privileges which he claims. However it must be added that the tenants come to the periodical Court of the Sheriff of the County twice in the year, and if they do not come the Sheriff shall impose a fine upon them. The Lord King hath the right to impose fines, and likewise the said tenants are bound to repair to the Hundred Court of Blackheath twice in the year represented by the "Borseholder" of Charlton and four men, and to take there an assize of bread and ale, and if they do not come they shall be mulcted, and because they say that the king is in possession of the land even so the said tenants must repair twice in the year to the said Court. And whereas he is entitled to impose fines if they do not come, and whereas likewise these same said tenants must repair twice in the year to the said court of Blackheath in the manner prescribed, and whereas also they must take there the aforesaid assize, therefore shall the Lord King have and hold thence his possession in peace and the Prior shall enjoy all his privileges without limit imposed, provided always the King and his heirs be not injured thereby and provided always he may summon (the Prior) if he desire to make any other arrangement afterwards.

Translation.

On behalf of the Prior and } Henry, by the grace of God, etc., to the Monastery of Bermondsey. } Archbishops, etc., Greeting.

Be it known unto you that we have granted and by this our charter have confirmed to our Well Beloved in Christ the Prior and Monastery of Bermondsey that they and their successors shall hold in perpetuity one market each week on Monday in their Manor of Charlton in the County of Kent, and one fair in the same place each year lasting for three days, namely, upon the Vigil and Feast of the Holy Trinity and upon the day following provided that market and fair are in no wise to the detriment of neighbouring markets and fairs. So we will and so it is provided. And these are witnesses thereto.

Henry, of Germany, our nephew, etc.

[NOTE.—This fair afterwards became quite historic, and was not finally abolished till a few years ago. Mr. W. T. Vincent gives many interesting references to it in his "Records of Old Woolwich."]

We extract the next document from the De Banco Roll of 15 Edward I (1287). It gives us an interesting description of a squabble between the Prior of Bermondsey and the Bishop of Rochester over the Presentation to the Living.* We copy from Thorpe's "Registrum Roffense."

Assisa Venit recognoscere quis advocatus tempore pacis persentavit ultimam parsonam que mortua est ad ecclesiam de Cherlton. Que vacat, et cujus advocacionem prior de Bermundeseye clamat versus Thomam episcopam Roffens. Et episcopus per attornatum suum venit, et concedit predicto priori presentationem suam hac vice ad predictam ecclesiam, salvo sibi jure suo cum alias inde loqui voluerit. Ideo predictus prior habet breve ad ipsum episcopum, quod non obstante reclamacione sua ad presentationem ipsius prioris ad predictam ecclesiam hac vice ydoneam personam admittat. Istud placitum irrotulatum fuit coram Thoma de Weylande, et sociis suis, justiciariis domini regis de Banco, apud Westmonasterium a die sancti michealis in unum mensem, anno regni regis Edwardi quinto-decimo, incipienti sexto-decimo.

Translation.

A commissioner came to enquire who the Patron was who when there was no dispute presented the last Parson, now deceased, to the Church of Charlton, now vacant, to which the Prior of Bermondsey claims the right to present against Thomas, Bishop of Rochester.

The Bishop appeared in the person of his attorney and yielded the presentation to the aforesaid Church on this occasion to the said Prior, always provided that his own right be observed if on any other occasion he desired to nominate to that living. The said Prior therefore presented a brief to the Bishop himself that whereas his counter-claim did not hinder the Prior's presentation to the said Church the Bishop should on this occasion admit a suitable person.

This decision was ratified in the presence of Thomas de Weyland and his fellows, the Justices of the King's Bench at Westminster, to take effect one month from St. Michael's Day, in the 15th-16th year of the reign of King Edward.

[NOTE.—The Bishop of Rochester referred to is Thomas Inglethorpe.]

* We think this presumptive evidence of a church here at Charlton as early as reign of Edward I.

In the reign of Edward II the Prior of Bermondsey's rights in Charlton seem to be once again a subject of dispute, and again a writ of "Quo Warranto" issues against him.

Edward III, however, confirms the Charter for the Weekly Market and the Fair on the Feast of St. Luke. This confirmation is included in an immense Charter of Privileges granted by the King to the now very important and influential monastery of St. Saviour at Bermondsey. The Charter occupies a space of about two feet of the Charter Roll and would fill about forty of our modern folios. (Charter 4 E. III n. 57.)

And now, alas! we hear nothing more of the Prior and his doings at Charlton until just before the heavy hand of Bluff King Harry the Eighth fell upon and put an end to all Abbots and Priors, and confiscated all their lands and goods to swell the Royal Coffers.

In 1527 Robert, Bishop of St. Asaph and Abbot of Bermondsey, leased the Manor of Charlton for 33 years to Sir Christopher Garneys. Only nine years later, i.e., in 1536, the blow fell, and the Monastery of Bermondsey became only a memory, and we must assume that the Royal Attorney instructed Sir Christopher Garneys for the future to pay his rent to his Most Sovereign Lord the King.

[NOTE.—Before we pass on to the Post-Reformation history of the Manor, we wish to point out that there are many documents in the Record Office, some identified, but many not identified, referring to the various villages called Charlton scattered up and down the country. We give the reference to one of them, as a sample, from Vol. III of the Descriptive Catalogue of Antient Deeds in the Record Office. No. A 4997.

Demise by Thos. de Hecham to Dunstan de Kingeston, Citizen of London for 15 years, of land, rents and tenements, with houses and the third part of a mill in Woolwych and Charlton, reserving a wood. Michealmas, A.D. 1275.]

The next tenant under the Crown, after Sir Christopher Garneys, was William Rice, who obtained a lease for forty years,* in which the Manor House is mentioned. However, in 1558, Queen Mary conveyed the manor to Sir Thomas White,† William Blackwell, John White, and Roger Martyn and their heirs, to hold, with other premises in capite, by service of the fortieth part of one knight's fee.‡

It, however, again vested in the Crown, and was granted to Lady Anne Parry by Queen Elizabeth for a term of twenty-one years, to commence in 1595, on the determination of the lease to William Rice aforesaid. This lady bequeathed her interest in the manor to Thomas Fortescue, of Donnington, Berks, her son by her first husband, the unfortunate Sir Adrian Fortescue, who perished on the scaffold in 1539.

On October 18th, 1603, King James I granted§ the Manor of Charlton, together with Ballard's Mill [which latter had been left by the will of Robert Ballard for an "obit" for his soul's good for ever, and had come into the ‡ Pat. 5 and 6, Ph. & M., p. 3, m. 1. This again is a very long deed, conveying many other properties as well. There were many such grants about this time. They were most probably only made in order to discover definitely to whom the manors really did belong, and were not meant to take effect in actuality.

possession of the Crown by a Statute, 1 Edward VI, chap. 14, for the Royal Appropriation of such gifts] and the Manor of Kidbrook, together with many other valuable manors, to John Erskine, Earl of Mar, not "in capite," but "in full and common socage." In June, 1606, however, the Earl of Mar conveyed the Manor to Sir James Erskine, of Okinge, co. Surrey, and he sold it in the following year to Adam Newton.* Adam Newton's son, Sir Henry Puckering Newton, Bart., spent so much of his substance in the "Royal Cause," that he was forced to sell Charlton Manor, the purchaser being Sir William Ducie, son of the rich Sir Robert Ducie, Lord Mayor of London in 1630 and Banker to King Charles I, who left what was then the vast fortune of £400,000.

In 1680 occurred the last sale of the Manor, the purchaser being Sir William Langhorne,† Bart. Drake sums up the remaining history of the Manor in these words: "He (Sir William Langhorne) entailed the Manor on his nephew and heir, Sir John Conyers, whose only surviving son and heir, Sir Baldwin Conyers, died without surviving male issue; then on William Langhorne Games, Esq., who died without issue male; and lastly on the Rev. John Maryon, who devised it to his niece, Margaret Maria Weller, with remainder to her sole daughter, Jane, who carried it in marriage to the family of Wilson, where it now remains." This is certainly the crystal of the story, but we will elaborate it a little as follows:—

In 1679‡ Sir William Ducie, who had been created Viscount Downe by King Charles II, died at Charlton House without issue, and his executors sold the Manor of Charlton to Sir William Langhorne, Bart., who, although twice married, died without issue 16th February, 1714–15, aged 85, and was buried in Charlton Church. Sir William Langhorne was also Lord of the Manor of Hampstead by purchase, but, although the history of the devolution of the two manors soon became identical, it was not originally so intended by Sir William, for he entailed the Manor at Hampstead first on the son of his elder sister by Mr. Games, i.e., on William Langhorne Games and his heirs male, with remainder to the son of his next sister by Sir Christopher Conyers, Bart., i.e., Sir John Conyers, Bart., and his heirs male, with further remainders identical with those at Charlton, while he observed the reverse order at Charlton, the Manor being here entailed first on Sir John Conyers, Bart., and his heirs male, and secondly on William Langhorne Games and his heirs male, and remainders as before. Thus it was only by the failure of the ultimate issue male of both William Langhorne Games and Sir John Conyers, Bart., that the two Manors came into one ownership. The Manor at Charlton was owned by Sir John Conyers, Bart., till his death, 14th September, 1719, aged 75. He had large possessions elsewhere, and was buried at Great Stoughton, Hunts. His son, Sir Baldwin Conyers, Bart., dying without surviving male issue in 1731, William Langhorne Games inherited, but he died unmarried 27th January, 1732, and is said to have been buried at Charlton. Thus the Manor devolved on John Maryon, who was the devisee in ultimate remainder under the will of Sir William Langhorne.

This John Maryon was the son of Joseph Maryon, Rector of White Roding, Essex, and Margaret Crouch. His mother, Margaret Crouch, was the daughter of Charles Crouch, of Layston, Herts, and Frances Langhorne, * Lyson says Sir James Erskine paid the Earl of Mar £2,000, and sold it the next year to Newton for £4,500.

daughter and heir of Benjamin Langhorne, of St. Ippolyts, near Hitchin, Herts. He himself afterwards became Rector of White Roding, Essex, and dying without surviving issue 28th November, 1760, he devised the Manor of Charlton to his niece, Margaret Weller, the daughter of his sister Maryon by William Peers, and at that time widow of John Badger Weller, of Hornchurch. In 1761 this lady took for her second husband one John Jones. In 1767 her only child, Jane Weller, married Lieut.-Genl. Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson, Bart. Margaret Jones died 1777; her daughter, Jane Wilson, died in 1818, leaving her son, Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, Bart., Lord of the Manor, and from him it has descended in direct line to his great-grandson, the present owner, Sir Spencer Pocklington Maryon-Wilson, eleventh Baronet.

Families connected with Charlton.

The following seem to call for slight genealogical and biographical notes:—

BLOUNT.

Edward Blount (portions of whose tomb still remain in the Church, namely, two brass plates, one with inscription (as given) nailed on a pillar, and the other with coat of arms nailed under a window on the north wall) was the second son of Thomas Blount by his second wife, Elizabeth Ball, widow of Lawrence Ball, of London, gent. (she was born Elizabeth Hote, and married firstly one Gage, secondly Lawrence Ball as above), who on the 18th of March, 1549, had purchased the fee simple of Wricklemarsh for £400 from William Greaye, of Reading. Edward Blount only acquired part of the Manor of Wricklemarsh in right of his wife, the other portion being conveyed by her son, Sophony Ball, to Brian Annesley, of London. On 1st November, 1656, his son, Thomas Blount, settled it on his own son Thomas, who, on 7th July, 1669, conveyed it to Sir John Morden (q.v.).

We can learn very little of the various members of his family. His eldest son, Thomas, under the title of Col. Blount, is frequently mentioned in Evelyn's Diary, but mostly on account of his mechanical devices, such as his new kind of plough, and his "way-wiser" for telling the distance his coach travelled, evidently a species of seventeenth century cyclometer. We give one reference under 30th September, 1659, from Evelyn, "I went to Sir William Ducie and Col. Blount, where I met Sir Henry Blount, the famous traveller and water-drinker." [This Sir Henry Blount (1602-1682) was the third son of Sir Thomas Pope Blount, Bart., of Tittenhanger, Herts.] Col. Thomas Blount appears to have got into trouble at the restoration. In the Cal. State Papers, Domestic Series, 1660-61, under January 25th, we find him pleading against an insinuation that he was not a good Royalist. As a matter of fact he was actually clapped into prison at the restoration of King Charles II. In 1661-2 William Boreman, of Greenwich, pleads for him to Secretary Nicholas that at least he may have a hearing. Future events show that he evidently cleared his character. The family of Blount is so large that we have found it almost impossible to link up this branch with the original parent stem. Our principal clue arises from the fact that those at Charlton incorporate the coat of Cornwall in their arms. This Edward Blount's grandfather (William Blount) is mentioned by Drake as of Waddesley and Glose, co. Salop. This is most probably William Blount, of Wadley and Glazeley, co. Salop. In the arms as given on this tomb occurs the mullet, which is the differencing mark for the descendants from a third son. Now the gentleman who fits in best with the above William of Glazeley is William, fourth son of John Blount, of Kinlet, by Alicia, daughter of Kynard de la Bere, and grandson of Sir John Blount, of Sodington, who married secondly Isabella Cornwall, of Kinlet, daughter and heir of Sir Brian Cornwall. But there is no certainty at present about this matter, for in 1505 we find one, Peter Blount, the great grandson of the above Sir John Blount, of Sodington, through his first wife, Juliana Fowleshurst, marrying Ann, daughter of Sir Edward Cornwall, of Burford. These Blounts at Charlton may have been descended from a third son of this match.

CONGREVE.

General Sir William Congreve, first Baronet, here buried, was Comptroller of the Royal Laboratory, and was created a Baronet 7th December, 1812. He was descended from the Congreves of Staffordshire; the Poet and Playwright, William Congreve, being, almost certainly, his great-uncle. He has most unfortunately been confused with his rather more distinguished son, also General Sir William Congreve, second Baronet, who was also Comptroller of the Royal Laboratory in succession to his father. This latter, not the first Sir William, was in reality the inventor of the "Congreve Rockets," which did such good service at the battle of Leipzig, for which service he received from the Emperor Alexander of Russia, the insignia of the Russian order of St. Anne. This latter died at Toulouse in 1828, where he is most probably buried. In 1829 John Burke mentions a Sir Ralph Thomas Congreve, brother of the above Sir William, as the third Baronet. However, there seems to be no further mention of him anywhere else.

In 1872 Debrett speaks of the Baronetcy of Congreve being in reality extinct, because what he describes as the third Baronet, namely William Augustus, son of Sir William, second Baronet, and another son, named Frederick, had then (1872) been lost for many years. Now (1908) there is only one of the books of present dignities which mentions the Baronetcy, and that, strange to say, is Burke. And by a still stranger irony, Burke, in 1907 ignores Burke of 1829 altogether, and speaks of William Augustus, third Baronet, born 1827, and his brother, Frederick Augustus, born 1828, as "not having been heard of for many years," thus altogether ignoring their own statement of 1829 re Sir Ralph Thomas Congreve.

CONYERS.

The Proud House of Conyers, who bore as a maunche or, were descended from Roger of Coigniers, in Normandy, who was invited by William the Conqueror, near the close of his reign, to come over to England. In 1095 William Carelippo, the Prince Bishop of Durham, who held almost sovereign sway in the north, appointed him Constable of the Castle of Durham. His son, grandson and great-grandson were all great barons, being Lords of Horton, in York, which took their name, and henceforth became known as Horton Conyers. The name of Conyers frequently figures in the Rolls of Arms of the warriors who fought under the banners of Edward III and Henry V in France and elsewhere. In 1628 John was created first Baronet by Charles I. His grandson, Sir John Conyers, third Baronet, is the one who became Lord of the Manor of Charlton. This gentleman's third son was named John, and this John may possibly be buried at Charlton in the Churchyard, for there is a curious ornamented tomb, with cherub heads and bead-work, date 1748, and inscription almost illegible, which although erected to the memory of one Northwood, has 'another inscription at the bottom, apparently to John Conyers. Sir John Conyers' son, Sir Baldwin Conyers, died without issue male, thus the Manor of Charlton was lost to the Conyers family, for the title reverted to Sir Ralph Conyers, Baronet, a cousin of Sir Baldwin. It is sad to read that the last Baronet, Sir Thomas Conyers, died in 1810 in great poverty in the Workhouse of Chester-le-Street. (Burke's "Vicissitudes of Families.")

CRAGGS.

In the "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica" is a most interesting report on the pedigree of James Craggs, Postmaster General; an extract from which we are tempted to quote. We quote from a portion of the depositions of John Craggs, uncle of the said James Craggs:—

"And the deponent farther saith that he hath seen the said arms on an antient gravestone which belonged to their family and which was destroyed and broke to pieces by the Scots in the time of the Civil Wars, and also that all their deeds and principal writings were lost and destroyed by hiding them in boxes under ground from the outrage of the Scots which this deponent very well remembers, by which means the evidences of their family was totally or almost all quite lost, and further this deponent saith not.

(Signed) "John Craggs."

The James Craggs here buried has also been the subject of much confusion. We have frequently seen him referred to in local books as the Secretary of State, whereas in reality he was Postmaster General, as stated on his tomb, his son being the rather famous Secretary of State. Horace Walpole, Old Peter Le Neve, the antiquary, and others have been unnecessarily caustic about his antecedents. [Walpole, of course, thought it great presumption that James Craggs the younger, the Secretary of State, should "contest a seat" against the all-powerful Sir Robert Walpole, hence the reason for his sarcasm, while with poor old Le Neve it was different, for to him greatness consisted entirely in yards of pedigree, which Craggs certainly had not.] However, the fact remains that his father, Anthony Craggs, was a country squire at Wolsingham, Co. Durham, with quite an appreciable amount of landed property, and although the Lady Mary Wortley Montagu speaks of this James Craggs the elder as "footman to the old Duchess of Norfolk," this statement admits of considerable softening. It most probably in this instance means Steward or Land Agent for the very vast estates of the House of Norfolk. We find mention of several members of this family as settled in County Durham. Hasted tells us that the grandfather of Anthony Craggs was settled at Landew and Wisersley, and we have discovered some of the Craggs family about this time (1700-1750) occupying the Manor of Seaton-Carrow, in this same County of Durham, and described as yeomen.

The subject of this note, James Craggs the elder, finds a place in the "Dictionary of National Biography." He was a man of remarkable energy and ability, which was spoilt by an all-consuming avarice. He heaped up a vast fortune, said to be over a million and a half of money, with which he hoped his son would become great, but alas for all his hopes his only son caught the small-pox and died (1721), and James the elder soon died too—it is said by his own hand.

His son, James Craggs the younger, was a man of much more mark than his father, possibly because he had a more liberal education at the Courts of Hanover and Turin. He certainly was employed on some most important negotiations, and although he has many detractors his praises have been loudly sung by his supporters. Alexander Pope was unflinching in his unstinted admiration of him, and laboured incessantly for the erection of the tomb in Westminster Abbey over his remains. He was said to be an exceedingly handsome man of most commanding presence. He died of small-pox as stated above (1721). He also finds a place in the "Dictionary of National Biography" (q.v. for further particulars of both).

And here let us venture to clear up another popular local error. We are frequently told that the Earls of St. Germans derive from Edward Eliot, of Port Eliot, who married Elizabeth Craggs. They do not. They derive from Edward Eliot, of Port Eliot (1727-1804), who was the son of Richard Eliot, of Port Eliot, by Harriot, illegitimate daughter of James Craggs the younger. This Harriot was married at the age of thirteen to Richard Eliot, and after his death she married a Hamilton, and became the mother of John James, Marquis of Abercorn. Like her father, she was celebrated for her good looks. Richard Eliot was a brother of the first-mentioned Edward Eliot (see Vivian's "Visitation of Cornwall").

CUNNINGHAM.

There is much confusion with regard to the Cunninghams in the days of the early Stuarts, as James I seems to have attracted several gentlemen of that name from Scotland to seek their fortune in London. This Sir David Cunningham, of London, Kt. and Bart., apparently died without issue, and by his will he left "Sir David Cunningham of Robertland Kt. and Bart. my honoured kinsman" his universal legatee. We wonder if he was related to the David Cunningham who was incumbent of Charlton about this time. They are both buried in Charlton Church, and one of them evidently presented the pulpit, which bears the arms of Cunningham.

DOUGLAS.

There is the description of the very grand funeral accorded to this distinguished soldier in the "Gentleman's Magazine," volume 84, page 413, but beyond informing us of the manner of his death and burial it does not much increase our knowledge of the man. Dr. Borthwick, who is described as a relation, was chief mourner, although an Admiral Douglas is mentioned among those present.

NOTE.—In August of same year another Maj.-Genl. Douglas, son of W. Douglas, of Bryton, Scotland, died at Narbonne of a wound received at Bayonne.

DUCIE.

Sir William Ducie, Bart., was second son of Sir Robert Ducie, Bart., Alderman of London, created Baronet 1629, by Charles I. His elder brother, Sir Richard Ducie, Bart., a great Royalist, had his estates sequestrated in 1643, and died, unmarried, 7th March, 1656-7, and was buried at Tortworth. Sir William Ducie, Bart., succeeded to the title, and was created after the Coronation of Charles II, 1661, Baron Cloncy and Viscount Downe. He married Frances, daughter and co-heir of Francis Seymour, first Baron Seymour of Trowbridge, and died at Charlton, 9th September, 1679. His nephew, Sir William Ducie, Bart., died in the Fleet Prison, 1691, leaving his brother, Robert Ducie, of Islington, heir to the Baronetcy, but he died, unmarried, 1703, and thus the title became extinct.

FRAZER.*

Sir Augustus Simon Frazer (1776-1835), Colonel, was only son of Col. Andrew Frazer, and grandson of George Frazer. His mother was Charlotte Durnford. He was born at Dunkirk. Became gentleman cadet at Woolwich, 1792. In 1793, at age of 17, he joined Duke of York in Flanders. He was present at battles of Nouveaux, Cateau Cambrésis, Tournay and Boxtel. In 1799 he served in the expedition to the Helder and at the battle of Bergen. In 1807 he commanded the artillery in the assault on Buenos Ayres. Served on Wellington's staff in Peninsular Wars. Was present at Salamanca and Osmá, and at the battle of Vittoria and the siege of San Sebastian, also at the battle of Toulouse. In 1815 he commanded the Artillery under Wellington, in Belgium, and by bringing nine-pounders into action instead of the old six-pounders, very much increased the effect produced by the English guns at Waterloo. This was his last engagement. He died at Woolwich, 1835.

GOSSET.

Sir William Gosset was second son of Matthew Gosset, of Bagot, Jersey, by Elizabeth Hilgrove. His great-uncle was Isaac Gosset (1713-1799), who was such a wonderful modeller of portraits in wax, even as his uncle, Matthew Gosset, had been before him (for these two artists see "Dictionary of National Biography"). Sir William was M.P. for Truro and Under-Secretary of State in Ireland; he was afterwards Sergeant-at-Arms to the House of Commons, till his death in 1848. He married Gertrude, daughter of Thomas Daniell, of Trelissick, Cornwall, by whom he had a son, Sir Ralph Allen Gossett, who was also Sergeant-at-Arms to the House of Commons.

HISLOP.*

Sir Thos. Hislop was third and youngest son of Lieut.-Col. William Hislop, R.A., who died at Woolwich, 1779. His two elder brothers were killed in India. The active service which he saw is mostly detailed upon his tomb. He was created a Baronet 2nd November, 1813. He seems to have behaved with considerable severity in India, and though defended in the Houses of Parliament by the Duke of Wellington his action at the Fort of Talner was never satisfactorily explained. After his signal victory over the rebellious Mahrattas at Mabridpore he arrived before the Fort of Talner, and on the refusal of the Mahratta Governor of the fort to surrender, he stormed the fort, hanged the governor as a rebel, and put the garrison of 300 to the sword.

LANGHORNE.*

Sir William Langhorne (1629-1715) was son of William Langhorne, East India Merchant, probably descended from the Langhornes of Layston, Herts., who were themselves a branch of the Langhornes of Fryers, Bedfordshire. He was admitted to the Inner Temple on 6th August, 1664. He succeeded to his father's East India trade, and was created Baronet, 1668. In 1670 he became Governor of Madras in succession to Sir William Winter. He left Madras in 1677, after seven years of difficult work in keeping the balance between England and France out there. He purchased the Manors of Charlton and Hampstead, and settled down in the former, dying at the ripe age of 85, and by his will leaving much of his wealth in a species of "Queen Anne's Bounty" bequest for augmenting poor livings. Charlton, at least, will always preserve the memory of his benefactions, for he left one thousand pounds to augment the living and money to build and endow a school.

MIDDLETON, OF BELSAY, NORTHUMBERLAND.

There is a good account of this family in Cokayne's Complete Baronetage, Vol. 3. The fourth Baronet, Sir William Lambert Middleton, married Anne, widow of Warner Perkins, hence the reason for his burial at Charlton, in the vault of St. Quentin Bladen Perkins. It is interesting to note that he was the grandson of the famous (or infamous) General Lambert, of Cromwell's Army, his father, Sir John Middleton, having married Frances, daughter and heir of John Lambert, of Carlton, in Craven, Yorks., and son of General John Lambert aforesaid (died 1683, aged 64).

MOFFAT.

"Gentleman's Magazine," 1790: "At Charlton, Kent, James Moffat, Esq., Director of East India Company. He was the oldest Commander in the Service, and would have had to be out of the direction by rotation in April next."

MORDEN.

No monograph of Charlton, however brief, should omit to mention Sir John Morden, Bart., who founded the well-known charity called "Morden College," which has always been so intimately connected with Charlton, standing as it does on a portion of the land forming the Old Manor of Wricklemarsh. Sir John was himself a Londoner, being only son of George

* See "Dictionary of National Biography."

Morden, of St. Bride's, citizen and goldsmith, by Martha, daughter of Thomas Harris, of London, but he came of a Suffolk family, whose pedigree is traced in Volume II of Mr. J. J. Muskett's well-known book. He entered into trade with the Turks at Aleppo. He was created a Baronet in 1688, and was M.P. for Colchester, 1695. He married Susan, daughter of Joseph Brand, of Edwardstone, Suffolk, and died without issue, 1708, aged 86, leaving nearly all his fortune to found "Morden College" for decayed Turkey Merchants.

PARKER.

This distinguished old General, who lost his leg at Waterloo, was a familiar figure in Charlton for many years. He was second son of Admiral Sir Hyde Parker (1739-1807, Knighted on April 21st, 1779) and younger brother of Vice-Admiral Hyde Parker (1784-1854). His youngest brother, Harry Parker, fell fighting for his country at Talavera, and so did his nephew, Captain Hyde Parker, who commanded the "Firebrand" in its attack on the Russian forts at the mouth of the Danube in 1854, and was killed in the action. His grandfather, Vice-Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, Bart., was a still more distinguished naval commander. The title had been created in 1681, in favour of Hugh Parker, Alderman of London, with special remainder to his nephew, Henry Parker, of Honington, Co. Warwick, who married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Hyde, Bishop of Salisbury, and first cousin of the first Earl of Clarendon. This Sir Henry was grandfather of Sir Hyde Parker, Bart. The title descended through Sir Harry Parker, Bart., of Melford Hall, Suffolk, elder brother of Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, Kt.

NEWTON.

Sir Adam Newton, Bart., who rebuilt the Church, is described in the deed of transfer of Charlton Manor to himself from Sir James Erskine, as Adam Newton, of Richmond, co. Surrey. We have failed altogether to trace his antecedents, but we are told in the "Dictionary of National Biography" that he was a native of Scotland. In early life he was a teacher at the College of St. Maixant, in Poitou. In 1600 he returned to Scotland, and was appointed tutor to Prince Henry, son of James VI of Scotland. In 1605 he married the daughter of Lord Keper Puckering, and, though a layman, was presented to the Deanery of Durham the same year. In 1606 he purchased the Manor of Charlton, and built a "goodly brave house" there. In 1610 Henry, Prince of Wales, was given a separate household, and Adam Newton was appointed Secretary. On the death of Prince Henry, in 1612, he was made Treasurer to Prince Charles, and in 1620 he sold the Deanery of Durham and was created a Baronet. After Charles I's accession he became Secretary to the Council, and in 1628 Secretary to the Marches of Wales, which last was a very lucrative post. He died 1629. He was a very learned scholar in Latin and Greek, and wrote several books in those languages. His son, Sir Henry Newton, the famous Royalist, came into the large estates of his uncle, Sir Thomas Puckering, in Warwickshire and elsewhere, and assumed the name and arms of Puckering. He died at the Priory, Warwick, in 1701, aged 83, and was buried with the Puckerings, in St. Mary's Church, Warwick. He kept open house for all poor Cavaliers who had been beggared in the Royal cause. These Puckerings must on no account be confused with the Pickeringings, of whom the most famous, Sir John Pickering, is buried at St. Helen's Church, Bishopsgate, London. On the death of Sir Henry Puckering-Newton the baronetcy became extinct.

PERCEVAL.

The family of Perceval have had a very long connection with Charlton. In 1766 an Act of Parliament was passed to enable John Jones and Margareta Maria, his wife, late Margareta Maria Weller, to grant a long lease of the Manor, and the Percevals accordingly became tenants, with the result that many of them are buried here, and hence it is that Charlton Church enshrines the mortal remains of that great and celebrated statesman, the Rt. Hon. Spencer Perceval. The connection of the Percevals with Charlton, however, begins much earlier than 1766, for in 1757 Catherine, first wife of the second Earl of Egmont, was buried here, and from that time onwards many of the Percevals have found a last resting place here, in fact, all the Earls of Egmont and most of their Countesses, and the connection with Charlton seems hardly yet severed, for the sixth Earl and his Countess were buried in Charlton Cemetery in 1874 and 1870 respectively.

RICHARDS.

[Burke, in his "Landed Gentry of Ireland," mentions a Brigadier-General Michael Richards who died 1721 unmarried, and who was fourth son of Col. Solomon Richards, of Solsborough, co. Wexford, who died October, 1691, and was buried in Westminster Abbey 6th of that month. His wife was Abigail, daughter of Henry Goddard, of Deptford and Chatham. This coincidence would certainly be worth investigating to discover the early history of the family to which the Charlton Michael Richards belonged.]

Michael Richards (1673-1721) was one of three very distinguished brothers, sons of Jacob Richards. His sister Elizabeth married the Rt. Hon. James Craggs, the elder, the Postmaster-General, whose monument is in the chancel of Charlton. He and his two brothers were distinguished not only for their great bravery but also for their remarkable talent in military engineering. Jacob, the eldest, was sent to Hungary to "survey, learn, and observe the fortifications," and he made many very valuable discoveries about explosives. He also did good work in Ireland at the siege of Carrickfergus and the battle of the Boyne, and later, in Flanders, with his brother Michael at the battle of Steinkirk. He was appointed Third Engineer of the Kingdom, and died in 1701. John, the next brother, saw service with the Venetians, and in the Polish and Portuguese armies. In 1706 he was sent by Marlborough into Spain, and became Governor of Alicant, where he was besieged. He sustained the siege for four months, and no relief came, and when the enemy invited him to inspect the mine they had dug under his fortifications he sent his engineer, and finding there really was a mine he wrote to his brother about the troops to be sent to his succour, ending, "Good night, Micky, God send us a merry meeting." Four days afterwards the enemy fired the mine and John Richards perished.

Michael, the youngest, whose monument is such a prominent object in our Church, was the most distinguished soldier of the three. He was a great favourite with John Churchill, the all-conquering Duke of Marlborough. When he was only eighteen years of age he was fighting under his brother Jacob in Ireland, and a year later was present in Flanders at the battles of Steinkirk and Landen. At twenty-two he was wounded at the siege of Namur. In 1696, when only twenty-three, his engineering genius was recognized, and he was appointed Chief Engineer and Commander-in-Chief to the Expedition to Newfoundland. In 1704 he joined Marlborough in the Netherlands, and was present at the battles of Schellenberg and Blenheim. In 1706 he was again in action at Ramilies, and carried the despatches after the battle from Marlborough to the Queen. He behaved with splendid bravery at the defeat at Almanza, covering the retreat of the sick and wounded. His genius in bridge-building made his services of unique value to Marlborough, and on more than one occasion he saved the situation by the rapid construction of a bridge. On 9th December, 1710, came the crowning effort of his pluck. He had now been fighting for over two years in Spain, having arrived there before the sad death of his brother John, whom he was too late to save, in March, 1709. The English Artillery, under Richards, arrived with von Staremberg's Army at Brehuega just half-an-hour too late, for Stanhope had been forced to surrender. However, they joined battle with Vendome, who had 20,000 men with him, and after a hard fight, lasting an hour-and-a-half, during which Richards' train was almost annihilated, the English won. This was Richards' last fight. He returned home September, 1711, and was appointed Chief Engineer of Great Britain, and spent his time visiting Portsmouth, Plymouth, Sheerness, etc. In 1720 he was instrumental in forming the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. He died 5th February, 1721, and his three nieces, daughters of his sister, by James Craggs the elder, erected the ridiculous monument over his remains in Charlton Church, by which he seems best known.

VERE.

Drake tells us that this Robert de Vere was third son of John de Vere, fifteenth Earl of Oxford, who died 1539, and was present at his father's funeral. He is not, however, mentioned by Brooke in the list of this nobleman's sons. But John de Vere married the heiress of the Trussels, Lords of the Manor of Shottisbrooke, so this would fit in well with the appointment of this Robert de Vere to be Lay Rector of Shottisbrooke College. He died in 1598, so if he was present at his father's funeral in 1539 he must have been a very old man when he died. He describes himself in his will as of Wricklemarsh, but he does not appear to have been Lord of that Manor, which probably by the 16th century had several houses in it, as it stretched much in the direction of the village of Lee.

WILSON.

There is a very interesting account of the early history of the ancestry of Sir Spencer Pocklington Maryon-Wilson, Bart. (now Lord of the Manor of Charlton, Kent, and of Hampstead and other places) to be found in Old Thomas Wotton's Baronetage. From this we gather that the family is descended from Thomas Wilson, of Elton, in Yorkshire (?) who in 1250 bore sable, a wolf saliant und in chief three estoiles or, even as the Wilsons of Charlton do to-day. His great grandson, Anthony Wilson, of Elton, married a daughter of John Profit, of Pocklington,* Yorks. Again, Anthony's great grandson, Thomas Wilson, of Elton, had two sons, William Wilson, of Stroby, Lincoln, and Edmond Wilson, of Tockwith.

We are not going to deal with the numerous ramifications of this very large family of Wilson, which, if properly done, would fill many weighty volumes, but we wish to explain a little matter in Drake's Hasted which seems to demand some explanation, for it conveyed to our minds a wrong impression which we have since been able to correct, and might also do so to others. It is an unintentional result of condensation. Most of the people living in the neighbourhood of Charlton talk loosely of the Wilson family as being descended from a very worthy and learned man of Queen Elizabeth's day, to wit, Sir Thomas Wilson, or Dr. Thomas Wilson, and those who have had the pleasure of visiting Charlton House are shown his portrait. Now this Dr. Thomas Wilson was certainly a cousin of the first Baronet, as we will presently show, and, moreover, he was in every respect a most worthy and learned man (see "Dictionary of National Biography"), but he is NOT the infamous Sir Thomas Wilson mentioned in the note on page 123 of Drake's Hasted, who behaved in such a devilish manner to the great Sir Walter Raleigh; and, after looking through many genealogical books, we do not believe that this latter was any relation at all to the worthy old Doctor. Dr. Thomas Wilson, whose biography in the Dictionary above-mentioned makes most interesting reading, was the great-great-grandson of William Wilson, of Stroby, aforementioned, while Sir William Wilson, first Baronet, was fifth in descent from Edmond Wilson, of Tockwith, brother of William Wilson, of Stroby. John Wilson, of Fletching, father of Sir William Wilson, first Baronet, was a lawyer of considerable note. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Gardener, and his mother was the daughter of William Smith, of Dringhouses, near York (see later, large coat of arms under Sir Thos. Maryon-Wilson's monument). Sir William Wilson was a Cavalier of considerable distinction, and several of his cousins fought in the Royal cause, his cousin Charles being slain at the King's side at the battle of Naseby. The future history of the Baronetcy is given in many books of present dignities, but it is noteworthy to remark that recent publications of the Historical Manuscripts Commission have thrown much new light on the services rendered by General Sir Thos. Spencer Wilson, sixth Baronet, in the Anglo-Hanoverian War, especially at the battle of Minden, in 1759.

The Parish Church of S. Luke.

This church was rebuilt by the Trustees of Sir Adam Newton about the year 1630. The north aisle was added in 1693 by the Blounts of Wrinkle-marsh, and the chancel in 1840. The church was repewed and the vestry built in 1874. There is a small portion of the old flint and stone wall of the previous church incorporated in the present south wall and encased with brick.

Monumental Inscriptions inside the Church.

The numbers attached to these monuments and tablets inside the Church are only given as indicating a rough idea of their position; the Church being so small that we did not think it necessary to more closely identify them. They read from the north-west corner up the north aisle into the chancel and down the nave. Thus the big Langhorne monument is No. 1, while the big Newton monument is No. 50, and those in the chancel are roughly from 20-30. Where the inscriptions are given in italics without numbers they are not now to be seen, but are mostly extracted from Thorpe's "Registrum Roffense," p. 843.

CONGREVE (38). Near this marble are deposited the mortal remains of Sir WILLIAM CONGREVE, Baronet, late Lieut.-General of His Majesty's Forces and Col.-Commandant of the 8th Batt. of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, Controller of the Royal Laboratory and Superintendent of the Royal Military Repository, of which most valuable Institution he was the Founder. His ardent devotion to his country's service in his military character and his inflexible integrity in the discharge of his civil offices are universally acknowledged.

In the former he served with distinguished reputation at the sieges of Louisburg, the Havannah and Martinique, in most of the campaigns during the American War, and commanded the Brigade of Artillery under H.R.H. the Duke of York, in Flanders.

In the latter he had the happiness of saving his country more than One million sterling, yet died unenriched himself on the 30th April, 1814.

Dame JULIA ELIZABETH,* his widow, died the 6th December, 1832, in the 78th year of her age, humbly trusting in the atonement of the Redeemer, Whose example she prayerfully strove to follow throughout a life of unobtrusive charity.

Beneath this tablet are the arms: Sable, a chevron argent between 3 battle axes heads to the dexter or over all an oak-tree proper.

CONGREVE (60). In memory of Mrs. REBECCA CONGREVE,† the wife of Major William Congreve, of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, who died the 1st of April, 1791, aged 32 years.

Also of Miss REBECCA JANET CONGREVE, daughter of the above, who died the 29 of March, 1780, aged 7 months and 8 days.

Also in memory of Lieutenant General Sir WILLIAM CONGREVE, Bart., Commander of the 8 Battalion Royal Regiment of Artillery and Controller of the Royal Laboratory. He died 30 April, 1814, in the 71st year of his age.

CRAGGS (20). Here lieth the body of JAMES CRAGGS, late of London, Esquire, one of His Majesty's Postmasters General. He was the son of Mr. Anthony Craggs, of Holbeck, in the Parish of Walsingham,‡ County Palatine of Durham, Gentⁿ, and died 16 March, 1722. He had issue 1 son and 3 daughters, viz., the Right Hon. James Craggs, Esquire, one of the principal Secretaries of State to His present Majesty, who died one month before his said father, and 3 daughters who survived him. Anne, who married Mr. Newsham, of Chadshunt, in the Coy. of Warwick, Esq., and Elizabeth, who married Edward Eliot, of Port Eliot, in the Coy. Cornwall, Esquire, and Margaret, who married Samuel Trefusis, of Trefusis, in the said Coy. of Cornwall, Esq., which 3 daughters in duty erected this monument to the pious memory of the best of fathers.

[NOTE.—On the north wall of the Church is an achievement of arms in stone with the words "James Craggs, Esq^{re}," above it: Sable on a fesse or between 3 unpierced mullets crmine as many cross-crosslets of the last.]

* She was daughter of Daniel Oliver, of Blackheath, and widow of General Eyre.

† Daughter of Fleet Elmstone, Esq.

‡ It ought to be Walsingham, both here and on the Robinson tomb. We have suggested a theory in the Preface to account for the mistake.

CRAGGS (19). In memory of the virtuous and pious ELIZABETH CRAGGS, wife of James Craggs, Esquire, who departed this life the 20 day of January, 1711, in the 49th year of her age.

CRICKETT (47). In memory of JOHN GEORGE CRICKETT, Esq., Proctor of Doctors Commons, who died May 22, 1840, aged 45 years. The departed (whose loss is deeply felt by a widow and 9 children) was distinguished by clearness of judgment, integrity of conduct, kindness of manner, and warmth of affection. He was highly respected by the members of his profession and beloved by a numerous circle of friends. He counted all worldly honours dross for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus. Through life he was ever anxious to adorn the doctrine of the Saviour, and died simply depending on his precious blood and glorious righteousness, as his alone hope of everlasting salvation.

CROFTON (49). Sacred to the memory of MIRIAM, wife of Frederick Lowther Crofton, Esq., who died the 9 August, 1842, in her 31st year; and of MIRIAM LOWTHER, her daughter, who died the 12 Decr., 1841, aged 2 years.

DINGLEY (14). Sacred to the memory of ELIZABETH, daughter of Henry Thompson, Esq., of Kirby Hall, Co. York, the most deservedly beloved wife of Robert Dingley, of London, Merchant, a tender parent of 3 children, whom she nourished at her own breast, two only surviving, Susanna Cecilia and Robert Henry, whose praises are beyond the reach of pen and can be truly estimated only in that Blissful Region to which she was translated in the year of her Redeemer, 1759.

"Oh death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God who hath given her the victory through Christ."

Bust above the monument and shield on which were formerly these arms: Quarterly 1 and 4, az. a fesse argent on a chief of the second a mullet between 2 bezants of the field; 2 and 3, az. on two sceptres in saltire a crown or, impaling parted per fesse embattled argent and sable three martlets countercharged.

(On a black marble slab at the base of the Monument was Elizabeth Dingley, obiit 18 September, 1759, ætatis 50.)

DINGLEY (15). In memory of ROBERT DINGLEY, Esq., F.R.S., late of Lamb Abbey, in this County, one of the principal Promoters of the Magdalen Charities, who died the 8 August, 1781, aged 72, and lies interred in a vault in front of this marble.

Also in the same vault lieth interred ESTHER, the second wife of the above Robert Dingley, Esq., who died the 17 June, 1784, aged 66.

DORMAR, see BLOUNT (65).

DOUGLAS (48). Near this spot were deposited with Military Honors the remains of the much lamented Sir JOHN DOUGLAS, Knight, late Major-Genl. in the Army, Lieut.-Col. of the Royal Marines, and Groom of the Privy Chamber of his Royal Highness, the Duke of Sussex. He was second son of the late Lewis Douglas, Esq., of Garvault, in Scotland, born at Ivanfields, Dalkeith, October 12, 1762, and died at his house at Greenwich, March 4, 1814, aged 52 years.

His death called forth the following general order to his Corps:

Whilst the impressions attendant on the remains of our late brother officer, Sir John Douglas, are present in our minds, I would fain draw the attention of the Junior members of his corps to the animating prospects which his career holds out. In him will be perceived an officer of a corps almost constitutionally serving in subordinate detachments possessing the confidence of all in command with the love of those who obey. He is seen equally admired and trusted on every service; whether in the West Indies, America or Cape of Good Hope; whether animating his corps in defending one fortress or leading them to the reduction of another; whether in executing the most arduous duties or in bearing the most confidential and important dispatches. I need not repeat to you the distinguished part he acted in the long, glorious, and successful struggle for the defence of Acre or the reduction of El Arich; the siege of which he conducted in person, commanding the allied British and Ottoman Forces. The historian will associate Douglas and marines with the 1st discomfiture of the greatest conqueror on record. In his life will be found not only every honourable incentive to the soldier, but in his example the marine officers will see that Royal Approbation, confidence, and the bounty of a grateful country have been opened to reward his exertions. Death is equally the fate of all. May we be held in readiness for the unknown summons, and may the success of this brave soldier and worthy man be as indelibly engraven on the memory of the young marine as on the walls of Acre and of El Arich.

Signed } Andrew Burn,
Major-General.

Also in memory of ELIZABETH, widow of the above, who departed this life the 27 September, 1860, in the 90th year of her age.

Above are arms: Sa. on a mount vert 2 stags salient combatant arg. (for Fisher), impaling a coat containing 3 swords proper barwise points to the sinister arg. hilts and pommels or (for Rawlyns).

FRASER (24). In memory of Sir AUGUSTUS SIMON FRASER, K.C.B., F.R.S., Colonel of the R.H.A., Director of the Royal Laboratory, who died the 11 June, 1835, aged 59 years. With zeal rarely exceeded he took a distinguished part in the Campaign of Holland and Flanders in 1794, in South America in 1807, and in those of 1812 to 1815 in Portugal, Spain and France. He obtained honorable distinction for services at Vittoria, Nivelle, Nive, Toulouse and Waterloo. In times of peace equally ready to promote the public service. His attentions to Official duty were unwearied, few have died more extensively and deeply lamented. This tablet is erected by those who were nearest and dearest to him in testimony of their irreparable loss.

In memory of EMMA, widow of Sir Augustus Simon Fraser, K.C.B., F.R.S., Colonel of the R.H.A., born Dec. 20, 1785, died Novr. 22, 1856. Interred in Charlton Cemetery.

HISLOP (32). Sacred to the memory of Sir THOMAS HISLOP, Bart., G.C.B. He was born July 5, 1764, and having served 65 years, died May 3, 1843. He was present at the memorable siege of Gibraltar, at that of Toulon, and at the occupation of Corsica. He also served with distinction at the capture of the Dutch Colonies now forming British Guiana and Guadaloupe. He subsequently was appointed

Governor of Guiana and Trinidad. In 1814 he went to India as Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, and in 1817 had the exclusive command of the Army in the Deccan. On the 21 Dec., 1817, he commanded in person in the action of Mahedpore, when he totally defeated the army of Holcar, and thus after a short and brilliant campaign put an end to the Mahratta War. The Pindarees were extirpated and a peace concluded highly honorable to the army and favourable to the British interests in India. For the signal ability, energy, and promptitude displayed by him in these services he received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament, and created by his Sovereign King George the IV, K.G., C.B. In private life his goodness of heart and kindness of feeling were unflinching, and she who best knows the rare excellence of her beloved and lamented husband's character erects this tablet in testimony of her affectionate sorrow.

JONES (13). In memory of Mrs. MARGARETTA MARIA JONES, the wife of John Jones, Esq., and widow of John Badger Weller, late of Romford, County Essex, Esquire, by whom she had issue only one child. She died the 19 June, 1777, aged 64 years.

This monument was erected by her only child, Dame Jane Wilson, wife of Thomas Spencer Wilson, Bart.

Also to the memory of the Hon. CHARLES THOMAS PERCEVAL, first son of the Right Hon. Lord Arden.

Also CHARLES PERCEVAL, second son of the Hon. Spencer Perceval.

Also JOHN WILSON TREVELYAN and GEORGE THOMAS TREVELYAN, first and second son of John Trevelyan, Esq., all died in infancy.

Also RALEIGH TREVELYAN, third son of John Trevelyan, died 26 of July, 1814, aged 14 years.

KNIGHT, see RICHARDS (34).

LANGHORN (1). In the pious memory of the Right Hon. the Lady GRACE Viscountess of Ardmagh, second daughter of the Right Hon. John Earl of Rutland, and in second marriage wife to Sir William Langhorn, Bart., who exchanged this life for a better the 15 February, 1788, in the 69th year of her age. Her mortal remains are here deposited in hope of a blessed resurrection, whose admirable endowments, conspicuous virtues, nobleness of mind, conjugale affection, sincere and exceptional piety, were illustrious instances that the wise King required no impractical accomplishments in His perfect Matron.

In the same affiance the body of Sir WILLIAM LANGHORN, who deceased the 26 February, 1714, in the 85th year of his age, is here disposed to its rest by that of his beloved consort.

Arms: Langhorne (sa. a cross argent on a chief of the same 3 bugle horns of the field stringed gules) impaling the well-known coat of Manners (borne by the Duke of Rutland).

See Benefactions at the end.

LANGHORN (28). In a vault is interred the body of Dame MARY LANGHORN, relict of Sir William Langhorn, Bart., and late wife of George Jones, Esq., in the Parish of Twickenham, in the Coy. of Middx., who departed this life May 26, A.D. 1730, aged 33 years.

Arms: Argent a chevron sable between 3 crowes proper impaling argent a fesse and in chief 3 lozenges conjoined sable.

LIVINGSTONE (?) (66). Here lieth the body of Mr. FRANCIS LIVINGSTONE, of London, Merchant. He departed this life . . . March, 169 $\frac{1}{2}$, aged . . . years.

(On a shield a castle with a griffin rising out of it.) Blue floor slab.

This stone is very much worn, but we believe it is correctly identified: 1, Because the name Livingstone occurs among the burials in the old note book referred to later; 2, Because the old Livingstones, Barons Livingstone, Earls of Newburgh, bore a castle in their ancient coat, and a castle is not a very common bearing.

LUARD (58). Sacred to the memory of MARY, wife of Captⁿ Robert Luard, of the Royal Reg^t of Artillery, and second daughter of Richard Elmhurst, Esq., of Fulletby, Coy. Lincs., who died the 8 March, 1841, aged 37 years.

Also of ROBERT REGINALD LUARD, Ensign in Her Majesty's 9th Reg^t of foot, son of the above, who died from an accident on his passage from Canada the 27 October, 1857, aged 19. His mortal remains were committed to the deep.

MCCLEVERTY (41). In a vault beneath the porch are deposited the remains of Major-General Sir ROBERT MCCLEVERTY, C.B., K.C.H., who died the 22 November, 1838, aged 75 years; and of ELIZABETH, his wife, who departed this life the 24 March, 1827, aged 56 years.

"Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

MILLER (57). Sacred to the memory of Major-Gen^l JAMES MILLER, of the Royal Reg^t of Artillery, who departed this life the 24 of March, 1825, aged 67 years.

Also JANE, relict of the above, and daughter of the late General Bramham, R.E., who departed this life the 7 March, 1838, in her 85th year.

Likewise her beloved daughter, JANE SARAH COOPER, who died in the same week, in her 58th year.

MOFFAT (51). In memory of JAMES MOFFAT, Esq., who departed this life 12 Oct^r, 1790, aged 62 years.

Arms above: Moffat (arg. a saltire gules and a chief azure) impaling arg. an eagle displayed sable on a chief dauncette az. 3 cross-crosslets of the field (White of Scotland).

MORDEN, see Benefactions at the end of this section.

MORRISON (44). Sacred to the memory of General GEORGE MORRISON, in whose peculiar goodness of heart and strength of understanding were united the most active benevolence and endearing manners. In grateful remembrance of his exceeding worth this testimony of departed happiness is placed by his widow, Mary Morrison, who humbly hopes a blessed reunion. He died November 26, 1799, aged 69 years.

Arms below: Or on a cross sable 5 fleur-de-lis of the field (for Morison, of Cadby, Lincolnshire, and Standen, Herts.) impaling on a field vary arg. and gules a canton or charged with a buck's face cabossed proper. (A field vary argent and gules is very uncommon, but it may be a mistake of the stonemason for the ordinary argent and azure.)

MORRISON (45). MARY, the daughter of Edward Becher, Esq., of Kingston, in Jamaica, the beloved and affectionate wife of General George Morrison; she died the 24 June, 1822, in her 86th year. Most deeply and deservedly lamented.

Translation.

Sacred to the memory of Dame Katherine Puckering. This monument, erected by an upright man to a distinguished lady, by a dearly loving husband to a sorely missed wife, was raised to the memory of Katherine Newton, youngest daughter of Sir John Puckering; Chancellor or Keeper of the Great Seal of England; a woman second to none in the quire of womanly Virtues, in Modesty, Uprightness and Chastity, by Sir Adam Newton, first Tutor then Private Secretary to Henry, most Illustrious Prince of Wales, and after he was cut off by an early death Receiver General to the Most Excellent Prince Charles, his brother. It is his fixed intention shortly to be interred in the same tomb.

The above-mentioned Sir Adam Newton some years after he had written the above epitaph, which he composed while surviving in the enjoyment of complete health [the death of his wife], was created Baronet by King James and afterwards appointed Secretary to the Council of the Marches of Wales.

He lies buried beneath this monument, as the pious devotion of his executors fulfilled his will, gladly awaiting the Resurrection through Christ his Redeemer.

He yielded his body to death on the 13th of January, 1629, but his soul had long dwelt in the heavenly regions before that. He left behind him five children, to wit one son and the rest daughters.

This handsome monument was erected by the elder Nicholas Stone,* and formerly stood in the north chancel. It is surmounted by a very fine shield of arms in white marble with the twin visors, crests and mantlings of Newton and Puckering.

* Walpole, "Anecdotes of Painting."

The arms are: Newton with the honourable augmentation granted by King James, i.e., azure, 2 ostrich's feathers in saltire (because Sir Adam Newton was tutor to Henry, Prince of Wales) between 3 boars' heads couped at the neck, heads to the dexter, argent bristled and tusked or; impaling, Puckering of 6 pieces; 1 and 6, sable a bend fusilly cotised argent (Puckering of Warwickshire); 2, . . . a mullet of 5 points unpierced (Ashton); 3, ermine in a fesse, 3 annulets (Barton, of Wherby, Yorks., or of Norfolk); 4, paly of eight (Langley (?)); 5, a bend dauncettée and in base a bendlet plain (Lever of Lever, Lancs.).

PARKER (33). In memory of Major-General JOHN BOTTELER PARKER, C.B., Lt.-Col. of the Royal Horse Artillery, Life Governor of the Royal Military Academy, who died at Woolwich, May 25, 1851, aged 66 years. His remains are deposited in a vault on the north side of this Church. He was second son of Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, and served in the Expedition to Walcheren in July, 1809. He was present at the siege of Flushing. He commanded a Brigade of Artillery at the battle of Vittoria and served at both sieges at San Sebastian, the battle of Orthez, the action of Tarbes and at the battle of Toulouse, and in 1815 he lost his leg at the battle of Waterloo.

PERCEVAL (2). Near this place are the mortal remains of the Right Hon. SPENCER PERCEVAL, first Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer, who died on the 11 May, 1812, in the Commons House of Parliament, in the 56th year of his age. His noblest epitaph is the regret of his Sovereign and his country, his most splendid monument the glory of England by his counsels maintained, exalted, amplified. But the hand of the Assassin not only broke asunder the brilliant chains of duty which bind a Statesman to his native land and made a void in the high and eloquent Councils of the Nation. It severed ties more delicate, those of conjugal and parental affection, and turned a home of peace and love into a house of mourning and desolation.

There is another memorial tablet to Perceval in Lincoln's Inn Chapel; and his achievement of arms, with the list of his honours, hangs in the Great Hall there.

It would be useless to record a few isolated facts in the career of this most brilliant statesman. In the awful opening of the nineteenth century his fame was almost European. His terrible death by the hand of a madman in the very midst of all his labours for his country's good plunged all England into mourning. The Rt. Hon. Spencer Walpole is his most recent biographer.

PERCEVAL (3). A modern brass Plate.

Sacred to the memory of JANE, second daur. of Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson, Bart, born the 7 July, 1769, died the 26 January, 1844. Married Aug^t 10, 1790, the Right Hon. Spencer Perceval, first Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer, seventh son of John, 2nd Earl of Egmont; married secondly Lieut.-Col. Sir Henry William Carr, K.C.B.

PERCEVAL (4). Here rests in blessed hope of everlasting life JANE, the wife of the Hon. Edward Perceval, daughter of the Right Hon. Spencer Perceval, nat. 23 Oct^r, 1791, nupt. 20 March, 1821, ob. 13 Janry., 1824.

"Gentle lady, may thy grave
Peace and quiet ever have,
After this thy travail sore
Sweet rest seize thee evermore,
Who to give the world increase
Shortened hast thine own life's lease."

PERCEVAL (5). Sacred to the memory of the Hon. EDWARD PERCEVAL, fourth son of the Right Hon. Charles George Lord Arden, who departed this life on the 10 March, 1840, in the 45th year of his age.

PERCEVAL (26). In a vault near this place are deposited MARY, the beloved wife of Frederick James Perceval, Esq. (second son of the late Right Hon. Spencer Perceval), who died the 24 April, 1843.

Also JAMES FRANCIS HORATIO, son of the above Frederick James and Emma Perceval, ob. 21 Oct^r, 1852, anno ætatis 7 months.

RICHARDS (34). In memory of the Hon. Brigadier MICHAEL RICHARDS, Surveyor General of Ordnance to his late Majesty King George the 1st, ob. the 5 Febr'y., 1721, æt. 48.

This monument is erected by his 3 nieces and executrix, daurs. of James Craggs, Esq., Anne, wife of John Knight, of County Essex, Esq., Elizabeth Eliot, widow, relict of Edward Eliot, of County Cornwall, Esq., and Dame Margaret, wife of Sir JOHN Hind Cotton, County Cambridge, Barronet.

This is a large monument with a representation of the deceased clothed in armour standing in martial attitude upon a pedestal. Behind are cannon and flags, and above a gauntlet and a shield with 3 roundels upon it (possibly his arms).

There is a very similar monument to this in the chancel at Sawbridgeworth Church, Herts.

RICHARDSON, see Inscription on Windows at end.

ROBINSON (21). Here lieth the body of Mrs. ANN ROBINSON, wife of Mr. George Robinson, late Merchant of the City of London, and daughter of Mr. Anthony Craggs, of Holbeck, in the Parish of Walsingham, County Palatine of Durham, Gentⁿ, who died Janry. 23, 1736, aged 79 years, and sister of James Craggs, Esq. (deceased), lately one of His Majesty's Postmasters General, whose monument is very near this place erected (being at the east end of this Church).

On the north wall is a lozenge of arms possibly formerly connected with this monument: A chevron charged with 3 wavy stars of 6 points between 3 bucks tripping 2 above 1 below (the Suffolk Robinsons bear a very similar coat, only with cinquefoils instead of 6 pointed stars), impaling Craggs as given earlier.

ROBINSON (31). In memory of Major CHARLES ROBINSON, of the Royal Marines, who, having served with distinction by sea and land upwards of 43 years, died the 2 Oct^r, 1849, aged 57 years, greatly respected and esteemed by his brother Officers, and deeply lamented and beloved by his family and friends. This tablet is placed as a tribute of affection by his widow.

MARY ROBINSON, widow of the above, died at Woolwich, 14 May, 1853, aged 55 years.

ROGERS (40). Sacred to the memory of Lieut^t-Col. HENRY ROGERS, R.A., who departed this life the 23 April, 1833, aged 74 years, and whose remains are interred in a vault near this tablet.

Also ISABELLA, second daur. of the above and Isabella his wife, who departed this life 13 October, 1838, in the 45th year of her age.

Arms above: Argent a chevron between 3 bucks passant sable (for Rogers, of Connington, Somerset).

RUSSEL, see Benefactions at the end of this section.

RUSSELL. A black marble stone with inscription in Roman capitals, now missing.

THOMAS RUSSELL, Esq., a pious Christian, charitable neighbour, true friend, and loving husband, deceased the 27 September, 1656, aged 63 years, and MARTHA, his only wife, who followed him in his virtuous life, sickness and death, deceased 17 Dec^r, 1656, aged 55 years, by heer interred together.

*"As some beheaded bodies seem to live
And move awhile, so she did.
Marriage doth make one flesh of man and wife,
Love them one soul did make and gave one life.
So death, which others doth divorce and sever,
Them in another wedlock joined for ever."*

Of four sons and 3 daughters born between them they left only one daughter, Elizabeth, married to Anthony Bateman, of London, Merchant, who dedicates this monument to their memory.

Above are these arms: A chevron between 3 cross-crosslets fitchée within a border charged with 6 besants, impaling a chevron embattled between 3 owls.

Crest: On a wreath a demi-lion holding a cross-crosslet fitchée.

RUTLAND, see LANGHORNE.

SEGER (35). A brass Plate.

Here lieth GEORGE SEGER, Gent., who was buried the 16 June, 1594.

There is a very small brass shield nailed to the wall on the other side of the window, which may be part of this brass. Quarterly 1 and 4, three oak leaves 2 and 1; 2 and 3, three roundels 2 and 1.

SMITH (23). Sacred to the memory of JOHN WEATHERALL SMITH, Captⁿ of the R.A., whose beloved remains are deposited in a vault near this tablet. He departed this life on the 22 April, 1839, aged 48 years. Was the only surviving son of General Sir John Smith, G.C.H., Colonel Commandant and Senior Officer of the same Corps, sincerely regretted and truly respected by all classes, and deeply deplored by his affectionate wife and son.

Also to CHARLOTTE, wife of the above, who died 15 July, 1868, aged 77 years.

Arms above: Azure a chevron between 3 birds,* 2 above 1 below, impaling a fir (?) tree proper. Two mottoes illegible.

SMITH (52). In memory of Colonel FRANCIS SMITH, R.A., died the 22 June, 1837, aged 66 years.

STAUNTON (29). Sacred to the memory of ANDREW AYLMER STAUNTON, M.D., R.A., who died at Woolwich on the 28 April, 1848.

Also to the memory of FREDERICA, wife of the above, who died the 2 Dec^r, 1854.

STOPFORD (63). In a vault near this spot are deposited the mortal remains of MIRA SOPHIA STOPFORD, wife of Capt. W. H. Stopford, of the R.A., and daur. of Lieut^t Colonel Bull, C.B., of the same Corps. After fulfilling with Christian fidelity the duties of daughter, wife and mother, she exchanged time for eternity on the 9 July, 1830, in the 25th year of her age.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

TEESDALE (25). In memory of Lieut^t HARRY S. TEESDALE, R.E., eldest son of Lieut^t-Col. H. S. Teesdale, Royal Military Academy, who after being severely wounded at the battle of the Alma, on the 20 Sept^r, died at Scutari, the 27 Oct^r, 1854, aged 23 years.

THOMPSON, see DINGLEY (14).

TREFUSIS, see CRAGGS (20).

TREVELYAN (6). To the memory of Dame MARIA TREVELYAN, third daughter of Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson, Bar^t, wife of Sir John Trevelyan, Bar^t, Nettlecombe, Coy. Somerset, and Wallington, Coy. Northumberland. Married August, 1791, died the 5 April, 1851, in the 80th year of her age.

VERE (DE), see DEVEER (36).

WALKER (16). In loving memory of FREDERICK HOWARD FORESTIER WALKER, Captⁿ on the Staff of the Egyptian Army, son of Colonel Edmond Walker, R.E., grandson of General Sir George Walker, Bar^t, G.C.B., &c., who fell at the battle of El Teb, Soudan, Febr'y 4, 1884, aged 21.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

WELLADVICE (56). In memory of THOMAS WELLADVICE, Esq., who departed this life the 23 Dec^r, 1807, aged 54 years.

Arms above: Vert on a chief arg. a bull passant regardant, impaling gules a chevron between 3 snakes heads erased at the neck argent.

WELLER, see JONES (13);
WILSON (11).

WILKINSON (37). Master EDWARD WILKINSON, Sen., late Master Coke to the Most Excellent and our Sofferayne Ladye Queene Elyzabeth, of Her Majesty's Household, and CLARE, his wyfe, the which Edward Wyirinson deceased the XXIII day of Febr'y., in the year of our Lord, 1567, and the X year of Her Majesty's Reign.

There was possibly a prayer at the end of the inscription where the stone seems to have been cut away.

This is a piece of square sandstone with achievement of arms and inscription beneath. At each of the 4 corners of the achievement the dexter coat is repeated in miniature.

Arms: Party per fesse embattled or and azure 3 demi-griffins segreant azure membered beaked and eared gules (Wilkinson, of Charlton), impaling a chevron between 3 martlets thereon an escutcheon of pretence a cross moline between 4 crescents. (These arms were granted to Wilkinson the 20 April, 1559, see Harl. MSS. 1470, fo. 269).

Edward Wilkinson was also Yeoman of the Month to King Henry the 8th and Anne Boleyn and Edward the 6th. In 1559 he had "for the space of 30 years and no more continued in these offices without blot of dishonesty in any of his services."

WILLIAMS, see Inscriptions on Windows at the end of this section.

WILLOCK (61). Sacred to the memory of ALEXANDER CHARLES WILLOCK, Esq., of the Royal Reg^t of Artillery, whose remains are interred in a vault beneath this Church, ob. the 6 April, 1821, aged 31.

WILSON (11). In memory of Sir THOMAS SPENCER WILSON, Bar^t, a Gentleman of His Majesty's Forces and Col. of the 50th Reg^t of Foot. He married Jane, the only child of John Badger Weller, of Romford, Co. Essex, Esq., by whom he had issue one son and 3 daughters all alive at the time of his decease, viz., Thomas Maryon Wilson, who succeeded to the title, Margaretta Elizabeth, married to Charles George Lord Arden, Jane, married to the Hon. Spencer Perceval, and Maria, married to John Trevelyan, Esq., eldest son of Sir John Trevelyan, of Nettlecombe, Co. Somerset, Bar^t. He departed this life the 29 August, 1798, in the 75th year of his age. This monument was erected by his widow, Dame Jane Wilson.

Above is a shield of arms, containing quarterly of 6 pieces: 1 and 6, Wilson; 2, Smythe; 3, sable a chevron between 3 bugle horns proper argent on a chief or 3 griffins heads erased of the first Gardiner (?); 4, may be Haddon, as stated by Hasted, but is now too much worn to identify; 5, sable a chief and 5 roundels in saltire or (for Byfield); over all on an inescutcheon of pretence the coat of Weller, i.e., sable 2 chevronelles ermine between 3 roses argent.

WILSON (9). In memory of Dame JANE WILSON, widow of the late Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson, Bar^t. She departed this life Aug^t 17, 1818, in the 71st year of her age.

On a lozenge are the arms of Wilson: Sable a wolf rampant and 3 estoiles in chief or, with Weller in pretence.

WILSON (7). In memory of Sir THOMAS MARYON WILSON, Bar^t, late Lord of the Manor, seventh in succession from Sir William Wilson, of East Bourne, in Coy. Sussex, who was created a Bar^t on 4 March, 1660. He died the 22 July, 1821, aged 48.

To the memory of CHARLOTTE, second daughter of the above, who died the 7 Sept^r the same year, aged 16. This monument was erected by Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, Bar^t, his son and heir, as a testimony of filial duty and of love and affection.

Also to the memory of SPENCER MARYON WILSON, Esq., his third son, died the 31 Aug^t, 1826, aged 22 years.

Also to the memory of JANE ELIZABETH WILSON, eldest daughter, who died the 10 April, 1838, in the 37th year of her age.

Also to the memory of JOHN MARYON WILSON, jun^r, Esq., a Lieut^t in H.M. 3rd West India Reg^t, son of John Maryon Wilson, Esq., second son of the above-named Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, who died at Up Park Camp, Kingstown, Jamaica, the 12 Aug^t, 1853, aged 25.

Also to the memory of ELIZABETH, his widow, who died the 8 Sept^r, 1853, aged 21 years, leaving one only child, an infant daughter.

"In the midst of life we are in death."

Shield of arms below: Quarterly of 16 pieces: 1 and 16, Wilson; 2, arg. on a bend gules between 2 unicorns heads erased of the first 3 lozenges or (Smythe); 3, sable 3 peacocks 2 and 1 proper (Pecock, of Finchley); 4, arg. a fesse sable in chief 3 mullets of 5 points unpierced (Townley, of Townley, Co. York); 5, argent on a bend sable 3 covered cups (Rixton); 6, paly of 6 or and azure on a chief of the second a griffin passant guardant of the first wings displayed (White, of Winchelsea, Sussex); 7, arg. a chevron gules within a bordure sable besantée (Vannell, of Norfolk); 8, or on a chief azure 3 cinquefoils of the first (Mocket, of Kent); 9, az. 2 lions rampant combattant or (Carter, of St. Cullumbe, Cornwall); 10, chequy gules and or over all a chevron azure charged with 3 annulets or (Gildridge, of East Bourne, Sussex); 11, argent 2 lions passant azure (Lovett?); 12, Gardiner (?); 13, or a naked human leg couped at the thigh az. Haddon; 14, Byfield; 15, Weller; all impaling Smith as coat number 2 above.

The Dales of Yorkshire, the Goldingtons of Bedfordshire, and the Hammers also all bear the coat number 11 as above.

WILSON (53). This monument was erected by Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson in memory of his beloved mother, Dame ELIZABETH, wife of Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, who died the 15 Nov^r, 1818, in the 48th year of her age.

Wilson impaling Smith the same as impaled and quartered on the tomb of her husband. The quartering being almost certainly for an earlier connection of the Wilsons with the same Smith family. This would explain the arms in the glass windows described by Mr. Swainson, one of them representing quarterly Wilson, Smith, Haddon and Weller, and being of earlier date than the above connection.

WILSON (64). Sacred to the memory of WILLIAM MARYON WILSON, Esq., fourth son of Sir Thomas Maryon Wilson, Bar^t, by Dame Elizabeth, his wife, who died June, 1808, aged 16 months.

Quarterly Wilson and Weller.

It is curious that he should bear his grandmother's arms quarterly, seeing the Wilsons did not incorporate the coat of Weller permanently in their arms.

WILSON (8). Sacred to the memory of Sir JOHN MARYON WILSON, 9th Bar^t, of Charlton House, Kent, born the 13 Dec^r, 1802, died the 11 May, 1876.

Also Dame CHARLOTTE JULIA WILSON, his wife, born the 13 February, 1808, died the 8 March, 1895.

Also JANE CHARLOTTE WILSON, eldest daughter of the above, born 7 January, 1827, died the 22 Janry., 1902.

"Christ our life."

[Monument of white and black marble.]

WILSON (10). This monument is erected by Sir John Maryon Wilson, Bar^t, of Charlton House, in memory of his dearly beloved son, Captⁿ DUDLEY MARYON WILSON, R.H.A., who died at Rawail Pindee, India, 24 Nov^r, 1871, aged 31 years.

WEST WINDOW.

To the glory of God and in loving memory of her father and only sister this window is erected by Maria Richardson, 1881.

NORTH AISLE.

This window is erected to the glory of God and in loving memory of EDWARD ARTHUR WILLIAMS, C.B., Lieut-General of the Royal Artillery, who entered into rest June 20, 1898, aged 74 years.

Also of his son ROBIN, who died August 8, 1898, of yellow fever, at Rio di Janeiro, aged 24 years.

Heraldic window of 6 pieces described by Rev. Chas. Swainson in the Annual Report of the Woolwich Antiquarian Society for 1897-8.

Beneath this window is a stone with the following inscription:—

The north west aisle of this Church was erected in the year 1693 by the executors of Sir William Newton, Bart, Patron of the living. Under his Will it was restored and repaired in 1873 by Sir John Maryon Wilson, Bart, Patron of the living and Lord of the Manor.

Francis Cameron, D.D., Rector.
William Wright } Churchwardens.
Charles Curtoys }

[NOTE.—This inscription is inaccurate, as Sir William Newton was alive in 1700. The truth is probably as stated on page 19.]

To the glory of God and in thankful memory of our mother, CHARLOTTE DALGETY, who died the 13 June, 1888.

Below this window is a coat of arms in brass with the motto "Evasi."
(See Blount, to which it belongs.)

To the memory of THOMAS GROVES, died May, 1874, aged 80 years, and to SOPHIA, his wife, died March, 1879, aged 82 years.

Arms: Ermine on a chevron gules 3 escalops or. Crest: a Talbot passant sable.

IN THE VESTRY.

This Church was repewed and enlarged, and this new vestry built by voluntary contributions during the years 1873-4.

Francis Cameron, D.D., Rector.

This Charity School and Vestry Room were erected at the charge of Sir William Langhorne, Bart, a Patron of this Church, Anno Domini 1713.

The above stone was removed from the old school room on the site of which the east end of the chancel stands, 1840.

Arthur Drummond, Rector.
 William Wright } Churchwardens.
 John Dobbs }

May we suggest that the Bugle Horn Inn outside the Church is far more probably named or renamed out of compliment to Sir William Langhorne, whose arms contain 3 bugle-horns, than from any vague connection with one of those numerous "horn fairs" formerly held in so many places.

EAST WINDOW.

The east window is the work of Isaac Oliver. The centre figure was inserted in 1882, when the half lengths of Moses and Aaron were made whole lengths. Of the three lower panels the two outside ones have coats of arms as follows:—

I.

Argent on a saltire gules an escallop or (See of Rochester), impaling quarterly.

1 and 4, grand quarters quarterly 1 and 4 per bend embattled sable above argent below; 2 and 3, azure a fleur-de-lis or [for Warner, Bishop of Rochester, consecrated A.D. 1637 (founded Bromley College, 1666)].

2 and 3, grand quarters vert a cross engrailed argent a coat of Warner.

II.

Azure three boars' heads coupé at the neck argent langued gules tusked or.

Crest: Out of a ducal coronet or a boar's head argent, James Newton, dated A.D. 1639.

James Newton was brother of Sir Adam and Gentleman Usher to King Charles I.

In the third panel is the following inscription:—

This window was glazed at the cost of James Newton, Esq., uncle of Sir Henry Puckering Newton, Barronet, son and heir to Sir Adam Newton, Barronet, deceased, A. 1639.

[NOTE.—There is still a small portion of a Latin inscription at the base of this window which may have belonged to some other window.]

SOUTH AISLE.

In memory of Sir THOMAS MARYON WILSON, Bart, who died May 5, 1869, and Sir JOHN MARYON WILSON, Bart, died May 11, 1876.

In this window is a plate showing the descent of the Baronetcy, which is given in full later.

Another window in south aisle has "The gift of Charles Curtoys, Churchwarden MDCCCLXXIX."

THE SCREEN.

To the glory of God and in memory of VIVIAN DERRING MAJENDIE,
April 24, 1898.

THE FALDSTOOL.

To the glory of God and in memory of HENRY GRILLS MAJENDIE,
February 12, 1900.

THE CANDLESTICK.

Taken from a Mahdi tomb on the 2 Sept^r, 1898, by the 37th Field Battery R.H.A., and presented to Lieut^t-Col. Helmsley, R.A., who commanded the Battery on that day, it having been looted by the Dervishes from the Christian Church at Khartoum at the sack of that place in 1885, restored to the services of the Church to the glory of God, 1899.

THE FONT.

This is classical, of wine glass shape, and of late date, and without inscription, with four escallops on the four faces, three turned inwards and one outwards, and a cover ornamented with fruit and flowers.

BENEFACTIONS.

There are three Tables of Benefactions at the west end on the south wall. They are as follows:—

I.

A full and particular account of the foundations, endowments of the schools, alms houses, and hospital within this parish of Charlton, and also of all such benefactions as have been left unto the Church and poor belonging to the said Parish, the value and uses for which they were given.

£1,000 given by Sir William Langhorne, Bt., to be laid out in freehold lands for the augmentation of the yearly income of the said rectory, etc.

£100 to be laid out in the purchase of freehold lands of inheritance for the use and benefit of such poor people as shall from time to time be placed in the almshouses belonging to the said parish by the minister and churchwardens for the time being.

III.

Mr. William Maddocks of Plumstead in the Co. of Kent bequeathed in the Year 1850 the sum of £937 10s. od. 3% consols in trust to the Rector and Churchwardens of this Parish for the time being to distribute the interest thereof as they may see fit among the inmates of the Almshouses opposite to the Fairfield at Old Charlton.

Arthur R. Drummond, Rector.

William Wright }
Thomas Weeks } Churchwardens.

Charlton, Oct., 1859.

There are other benefactions, by Miss Georgina Caffin, in 1888, about £600; Mr. William Fleming, 1895, about £180; and Mrs. Jane Webster Fox, 1903, about £90. The first two for the benefit of the poor of the Parish and the last for the upkeep of her husband's tomb in Charlton Cemetery.

These latter have not yet been inscribed on the boards in the Church, but particulars are to be found in the book of the Churchwardens' Accounts.

THE PULPIT.

This is a very nice plain example of Jacobean work, very slightly ornamented above the panels with cherubs heads and scroll work. On it are the arms of Sir David Cuningham (?), Kt. and Bt., one of the trustees for the rebuilding of the Church under Sir Adam Newton's will.

These arms are very curious.

All the Cunninghams (whether Conyngham, Cuningham, or Cunyngham) seem to bear the ordinary shake-fork, but here is what is anciently described as a Bishop's pall, that is a shake-fork which only terminates at the very edge of the shield. There is also in the chief angle an inescutcheon charged with a lion rampant crowned, while in the two base angles are castles embattled and machicolated all proper. The whole with the cherub face and scrolls below making a very pretty piece of Jacobean carving.

Under the tower of the Church inside is nailed what seems to be the old sounding board although apparently of different wood to the pulpit.

ROYAL ARMS.

There is a small example of the Royal arms, painted on wood of later date, surrounded by four little cherub heads. It is of the time of George III, being quarterly 1 and 4, England; 2, Scotland; 3, Ireland; over all Hanover ensigned with a royal crown. Up to 1816 the inescutcheon of Hanover was ensigned by an electoral bonnet. Hence it must be later than that date.

Mottoes: "Honi soit qui mal y pense" and "Semper Eadem."

There is another example of the royal arms in a large gilt frame also on the west wall, of the Stuart period, most probably put up in the time of Queen Anne, but certainly not later than the Union with Scotland, at which time the Royal arms underwent a change. This coat is: Quarterly first and fourth grand quarters, France and England quarterly; second grand quarter, Scotland; third, Ireland. Same two mottoes as above.

Nailed on the west wall is a small lozenge-shaped tin plate of about 1ft. square bearing these arms: Per pale sable and gules a chevron per pale gules and argent in the dexter 3 arrows 2 and 1 heads to the base and feathered proper (probably argent) and in the sinister 3 roundels sable 2 above and 1 below flaming or. Above is a baron's coronet and below the motto "Zeal and Honour," while the supporters are a stag and a unicorn.

Above on the same west wall is a very handsome hatchment containing: Quarterly first and fourth grand quarters, Perceval; second and third grand quarters, Blount and Cornwall quarterly: all impaling Wilson.

[NOTE.—In Drake's "Hundred of Blackheath" a hatchment is given as: 1 and 4, Blount; 2, Cornwall; 3, or on a bend gules 3 chaplets of the field, impaling or on a pile engrailed az. 3 garbs of the field (? Oldfield)].

THE REGISTERS.

The older volumes of the registers are as follows:—

One folio size. "The gift of Anthony Bateman," Baptisms, Marriages and Deaths, 1653-1753.

One small volume. Christenings, Marriages and Burials, 1695-1715.

Two small volumes of Baptisms, Burials and Marriages by special licence, 1754-1798 and 1799-1812.

A Churchwardens' Account Book, 1709-1726.

On the splay of the south window over the squire's pew is a brass plate bearing at the top the arms of Wilson with the motto, "Pro legibus et Regibus" and the following inscription:—

In Memoriam.

Sir WILLIAM WILSON, b. 1605, created Baronet for his loyalty on Mar. 4, 1660, by the title of Willelmus Wilson de Eastborne, Master of Horse to Earl of Suffolk, High Sherriff of Sussex, 1655, died 9 Dec., 1684, buried at Eastborne.

Deeply regretted by all who knew him.

YOUNG (311). Sacred to the memory of SARAH, widow of Colonel Sir Aretas William Young, Lieut^t-Gov^r of Prince Edward Island, and daughter of the late John Cox, of Coolcliffe, in Coy. Wexford, Esq. She departed this life at Woolwich, the 23 of May, 1838, in the 60th year of her age.

“Tell them it is an awful thing to die.
 ’Twas even to her. But the dread path once trod
 Heaven lifts its everlasting portals high,
 And bids the pure in heart behold their God.”

Further List of Charlton Burials.

The following is an uncorroborated list of persons buried in Charlton Churchyard, but not commemorated by any inscription now to be seen. It is extracted from an old note-book originally kept by Henry Carver in 1833, but added to irregularly for many years after. The only virtue of this list lies in the fact that any name found in it would suggest a search in the Parish Register. It, however, also shows incidentally what a very large number of people are buried in our old churchyards without any memorial stone of any kind. The figures wherever given refer to the date and the age of the person at death, and where the actual day is given, it is not the day of death, but the day of burial.

IN THIS LIST WE HAVE MADE NO ATTEMPT AT CORROBORATION of any kind, either by reference to the registers or otherwise.

ADDENDA.

[NOTE.—The monument numbers refer to the plan of the churchyard between pp. 44 and 45.]

In the year 1833 a plan of the churchyard was made, and before going to press I made vigorous but unsuccessful efforts to discover it. It has now come to light again, and thanks to the kindness of Major Sheppard I have been able to inspect it. Unfortunately these remarks are too late to be included in their proper place. Although the key to this old plan is lost we are able with the assistance of the old notebook to clear up several difficulties.

At first sight there appears to be a mistake in the drawing of this old plan, for the Bradford and Cooper tombs are quite near the south gate. The churchyard has evidently been extended a little both on the west and on the south since 1833.

Where the Dunbar tomb (No. 4) now stands was then a tomb marked Nicholson, while the large Falkingham monument has entirely disappeared, the site being occupied by that of Townsend.

Near 12 is a monument marked "Byers"; 14 is Mrs. ANN HUDSON, d. 1807, a. 52 years.

On the site of 16 (Russell) and 17 (Ranking) was the tomb of ANN OLD, d. November, 1842, a. 31 years.

No. 20 may be Stephenson; but several monuments have disappeared just here to the memory of the Archer, Blackhall, Hoge, Quance, Wight and Wooten families. The wife of Thomas Chamberlayne, and one WILLIAM FORD are buried between 34 and 36, where is now the Burnett monument.

Many tombs seem to have disappeared at the corner now occupied by Nos. 40-43, notably a large one marked "Buxton." The following were buried just here:—Miss SALLY BAKER, d. 1816, a. 21; CHARLOTTE COLEMAN, d. Dec., 1837, a. 38; Mrs. ANN CRODE, d. Apr., 1829, a. 74; REBECCA C. FEATHERSTONE, d. 1799; WILHELMINA LAFARGIN.

Near the Mitford monument (45) was a large tomb marked "Hoads," which seems to have disappeared as a result of the enlargement of the Richardson tomb (67). A certain Sergt. NICHOLS was also buried near this Richardson monument.

Between 70 and 89 were the tombs of GEORGE PARKS, d. Sep., 1834, a. 34, and JOHN MILLINGS, d. Dec., 1838; 74 may not be Prebble, as stated in text, but may be JOHN PARKER, d. 1801, a. 41.

Between 36 and 37 are buried GEORGE MILL and Mrs. DOWNS—the latter d. Jany., 1837, a. 49.

Near 87 is buried SARAH GEORGE, d. August, 1839, a. 45.

Near 91 are buried Mrs. JAMES, d. 1832, a. 60; also ANN JAMES, d. Jan., 1838, a. 64; also RICHARD JAMES, d. Feb., 1838, a. 72 years. Also Mrs. HOPGOOD, d. Aug., 1834; Mrs. THURLOW, d. Jany., 1825, a. 73; Mrs. THURLOW, d. Apr., 1837, a. 39; FANNY ELIZTH. THURLOW, d. Sep., 1837.

On the south of the Perceval monument were buried three people named NODRUM.

Near 90 are buried Mr. SAMUEL POILO, d. Dec., 1840, a. 32, and Mrs. MITCHELL, d. 1844.

Near 97 were buried RICHARD ANDREWS, Mrs. ANDREWS, ROBERT DAY, d. June, 1841, a. 65 years, and Mrs. DAY.

Near 111 are buried HARRIOT HINTON, d. 1842, a. 45; Mr. COPELAND, d. 1832.

To east of 128 lies Mrs. SEABROOK, d. Nov., 1829, a. 56.

Where 141 now stands are buried Mrs. BIBLER, WILLIAM NEWMAN BIBLER, d. Nov., 1837, a. 75; WILLIAM WATERMAN, d. 1830, a. 80.

Between 142 and 143 was the tomb of Mrs. HARMOND, d. 1826, a. 86.

Between the Middleton monument and the wall of the church, was a big grave marked "Riddle," and the stone of Charlotte Coleman, which latter was removed, by consent, to a position near 41, and has now disappeared.

Between 148 and 149 lies ESTHER LEGGATT, d. 1822, a. 42.

A large monument marked "Haynes" has entirely disappeared from between 151 and 152.

Between 156 and 158 was a large monument marked "Redmayne," which has also now disappeared.

At the corner, near 159, lie Mrs. BOLTON, d. Nov., 1857, a. 50, and Mrs. WHITFIELD.

Near 161 are buried THOMAS CARVER, d. 1825, a. 68, and Mrs. CARVER, d. 1826, a. 68.

Under what was then (1833) the east wall of the church were buried several members of the PRICKETT family.

Near 165 were buried THOMAS and Mrs. MEADOWS and JOHN BOYD—the latter d. 1833.

Just beyond 167 lie Mrs. WINGFIELD, d. 1836, a. 91, Mrs. ASHTON, d. Dec., 1826, a. 88, and several members of the HATCHARD family.

Owing to the extension of the church eastwards it is now impossible to trace where many of those mentioned in the old notebook lie at this corner of the churchyard. The following tombs, however, appear to have disappeared altogether:—

Large "Cowan" monument;

SOLOMON CORNSDALE, d. Feby., 1827, a. 48;

Mrs. ELIZABETH HUDSON, d. Mar., 1841, a. 27;

Mrs. SAMUEL ROOK, d. May, 1825, a. 84;

JAMES SIMPER, d. 1784, a. 45.

South of 200 lie Mr. and Mrs. WICKENDEN;

North of 178 lies THOMAS PARK, d. May, 1836, a. 65;

217 is the grave of WILLIAM SKYMY, Esq., d. 1806, a. 40.

Many tombs have disappeared north of 213, notably a large "Paige" monument, together with those of the Rev. WILLIAM GARDNER, d. 1812, a. 70, and Mrs. ANN NICHOLS, d. 1838, a. 86.

No. 251 is the tomb of the Noble family: Mrs. SUSANNA NOBLE, d. Nov., 1834, a. 64.

South of 253 lies THOMAS HAMPSHIRE, d. May, 1837, a. 77.

In the space north of Nos. 265 and 283 many monuments have disappeared, notably two large ones marked "Wightwick" and "Saunders."

No. 312 is the tomb of CATHERINE BLUND, d. July, 1834, a. 57.

Index of Places

Referred to on the monuments both in the church and churchyard; those inside the church being distinguished by the small letter "i" after the number of the monument. Where the monuments are not now existing the reference will give the name of the person commemorated, there being, of course, no number in such cases.

In using this Index for the churchyard, first refer to the list of names in numerical order, and from thence to the alphabetical list of names.
